To file debt repayment plan

Attorney General extends deadline

The City of Romulus will apparently get a deadline extension from the Attorney General's Office to file a financial plan for the repayment of the Water-Sewer Debt Retirement.

Regina King, assistant to the Attorney General, said yesterday that she would meet next week with representatives of the city in order to review the progress in clearing up a reported $1.9 million debt owed to the sewer fund.

The Attorney General's Office had given the city until June 30 to submit a plan for restoring the money, however, Ms. King reiterated the Attorney General's Office position "that we are not in the business of governing municipalities or townships but to insure that the laws governing them are followed."

"I see a good faith effort on the part of the city to resolve this problem," Ms. King continued, "and we are not concerned about a short delay, therefore, we have agreed to meet with city officials to discuss the plan further."

Ms. King said that her office was contacted by Robert E. Hammell, an attorney with Miller, Canfield, Paddock & Stone to review the plan.

Hammell, a municipal bond expert, was called into the discussions at the 12th hour by the city's administration to help resolve the problem. The council met with him in a special meeting last Wednesday and agreed to employ his services.

The special meeting turned out to be a lengthy dialogue between councilman Jimmie Raspberry, who initiated the state audit on behalf of the people of Romulus, and Hammell.

Raspberry had requested state Rep. Edward Mahalak (D-Romulus) to use his office to invite state auditors to look into the city's use and the transfer of water-sewer debt retirement funds.

In a report filed by Loren E. Monroe, of the Michigan Department of Treasury, after completing the 1983 audit, it was concluded by the auditors that "the City of Romulus immediately transfer $2,117,348.25 to the water debt service fund." The auditors also recommended that the assets of the fund be invested and the proceeds be used to retire the outstanding water debt bonds.

In that same report, the auditors pointed out that the city has on hand $1,213,327.21 in surplus bond monies and they went on to recommend that the City of Romulus dispose of the surplus sewer construction funds in accordance with the terms of the various contracts and the Attorney General's opinion."

Raspberry attacked the administration for not carrying out the Attorney General's recommendations. He also said that the administration's attempt to tag 1.78 mills for the sewer debt fund in the current budget was "a hoax on the people." The council eventually eliminated the 1.78 mills.

"One of the stipulations from the Attorney General's office in drawing up the repayment plan was that this city couldn't raise water and sewer rates. The citizens had paid for that service two if not fivefold," Raspberry said. "We would be charging them something they had already paid for."

Raspberry has asked that the city look into all funds kept in reserve on the county level for sewer and water line construction and repairs and to call them back, if necessary to meet the attorney general's recommendations.

Hammell said that one of the reasons why he wished to meet with the Attorney General's Office was to go over, in detail, expenditures made from the fund over the past two decades.

"If this city has used some of the funds to extend the system or to improve the system then these are legitimate uses," Hammell told council. "These are some avenues I would like to explore with them."

The ManuWay

Manufacturers Bank has installed a ManuWay Banking Center at its Romulus branch office, at 36450 Goddard, and Joan Nowacki (at right) and Mary Laverack try out the new convenience. Although the machine is owned by the Manufacturers Bank, customers of 125 Michigan banks, savings and loans, and credit unions that belong to the shared Magic Line system will be able to use the 24-hour a day service. The service, triggered by a plastic access card, offers a wide range of banking transactions.

Wineman sues city over rezoning for mobile park home

The courts will apparently have the final say on whether the Wineman Investment Co. will construct a Mobile Home Community in Romulus.

Denied that right by City Council when council refused to rezone approximately 200 acres for what was to become the "Streamwood" mobile park, the Wineman Investment Co. has filed a lawsuit in Circuit Court to declare the council's action as illegal.

Mayor William M. Oakley informed city council of the pending lawsuit via a memorandum which noted, in part, that the lawsuit is based on zoning issues.

"It has been our policy in the past to hire attorneys with particular expertise in the field of zoning to defend the city on such matters.

"Our retained legal counsel, Jenkins & Nystrom, indicates that they feel they can handle this case," the mayor's memorandum concluded.

Wineman presented a plan to council to develop about 200 acres of land in the north section of its property fronting along Ecorse Road and Venoy for the planned mobile home. The plan, which made its way through the Planning Commission, was rejected by Council.

The land is presently vacant and is zoned single family residential. It must be rezoned for a mobile park if the investment firm is permitted to continue with the project.

In the complaint, Wineman named the City of Romulus as the defendant.

Romulus man is arraigned in murder of New Boston woman

By JERRY DESHARNAIS
(Special ANP Writer)

A 22-year-old man was arraigned Monday on a first degree murder charge in the death of Dixie Cobb, a 41-year-old New Boston woman.

Gregory Heissler, of 14068 Huron River Drive, Romulus, was also charged with criminal sexual conduct.

Heissler was taken to Wayne County Jail where he is being held without bond. Heissler was arraigned by Judge Henry Zaborowski of the 34th District Court in Romulus. A preliminary examination in Heissler's case will be held there July 6.

"We've got a suspected murderer in custody," said Sgt. John Maier of the Huron Police Department. "He's been charged with the murder of Dixie Cobb."

Events began in the case around 4 p.m. Monday afternoon, June 20, when boaters on the Huron River noticed the dead nude body of a woman in the water, about 1/2 mile from the Waltz Road Bridge.

Police and firemen were summoned and her body was retrieved from the water. Her face had some bruises and none of the fire or police personnel could make identification.

No leads were available to Sgt. Maier or to Det. Sgt. Jay Dorenbecker of the State Police who was assigned to the investigation.

However, late Friday evening, State Police in Flat Rock received an anonymous phone call from a person claiming knowledge of the identity of the victim and the person who killed her.

At 6:25 p.m. Saturday, police arrested two suspects for questioning, Heissler and a 28-year-old New Boston man who was later released.

"Dixie Cobb was at the Chop's New Boston Inn Sunday night, June 19," said Sgt. Maier when asked to reconstruct the evening of the murder.

"When the bar closed shortly before 2 a.m., she left," he continued. "Three other people were in the bar also, along with the owner, of course, Walter Porchak, running the bar."

"Greg Heissler (was one)...the other two we cannot give out their names."

"Dixie left the bar and Greg Heissler along with these other two subjects also left, and the next thing we know Dixie went home and Greg Heissler entered the house."

"Once inside, it is believed he sexually assaulted her and beat her with some type of an instrument."

"There were two eye-witnesses to the incident."

Maier said the murder occurred sometime after 2 a.m. "After she was murdered she was thrown into the river," said Maier. Dixie Cobb's home is located about 150 feet from the Waltz Road Bridge.

Because of legalities, the identities of the eyewitnesses will not be revealed by police. This information may be divulged at the criminal examination July 6.

Heissler, a mechanic, lived in two apartments in the village of New Boston with his young wife and baby child until moving to the Romulus address.

He claimed to be from Alabama. Wayne County Sheriff's Dept. has no record of criminal activity on Heissler, nor do the Huron or Romulus police show any record.

The victim was born Dixie LaRoe in Ann Arbor on June 1, 1942.

She graduated from Ann Arbor Pioneer High School in 1960 and was married a few days later to Garland Cobb, a bricklayer.

The couple took up residence in Belleville for 13 years and resided in New Boston for the past 10 years. Ms. Cobb was a homemaker and a mother of three children: a daughter, Terry, 21; a son, Ronald, 19; and another daughter, Sandra, 15.

The couple had been living separately for the past five months following a divorce Feb. 4. Cobb lives with the three children in the New Boston area.

Murder chills Huron community

By JERRY DESHARNAIS
(Special ANP Writer)

"Everybody's upset about it because everybody knew her."

That remark, by Donna Webb, waitress at Maryann's Restaurant in the village of New Boston, might sum up the reaction of this small community to the murder of Dixie Cobb.

Everybody knows everybody in fact and it makes the murder a little closer to home than if it would happen in a big city.

"I think it's more than just a tragedy for her," said Arthella Stoner, housewife. "She had some children. It's bad for the whole town. Our kids went to school with her kids. It touches the whole town. Stuff like that just doesn't happen here."

The fact that the victim and the murder suspect both come from the same community has made the case all the more chilling.

Few people can ever recall a case like it. Stan Uchman, 69, who operates a barber shop in the village said he would have to go back to his childhood for an incident like this. "I've been here all my life and I can't remember anything like it."

"I knew her (Dixie Cobb) quite well, not personally, she would go by and wave. For me, she never bothered anybody," he added.

The Huron police department has been getting some of the reaction too.

"We have gotten five or six calls," said Sgt. John Maier, "to find out if the man was arrested Tuesday morning, and how they can go about getting a gun."

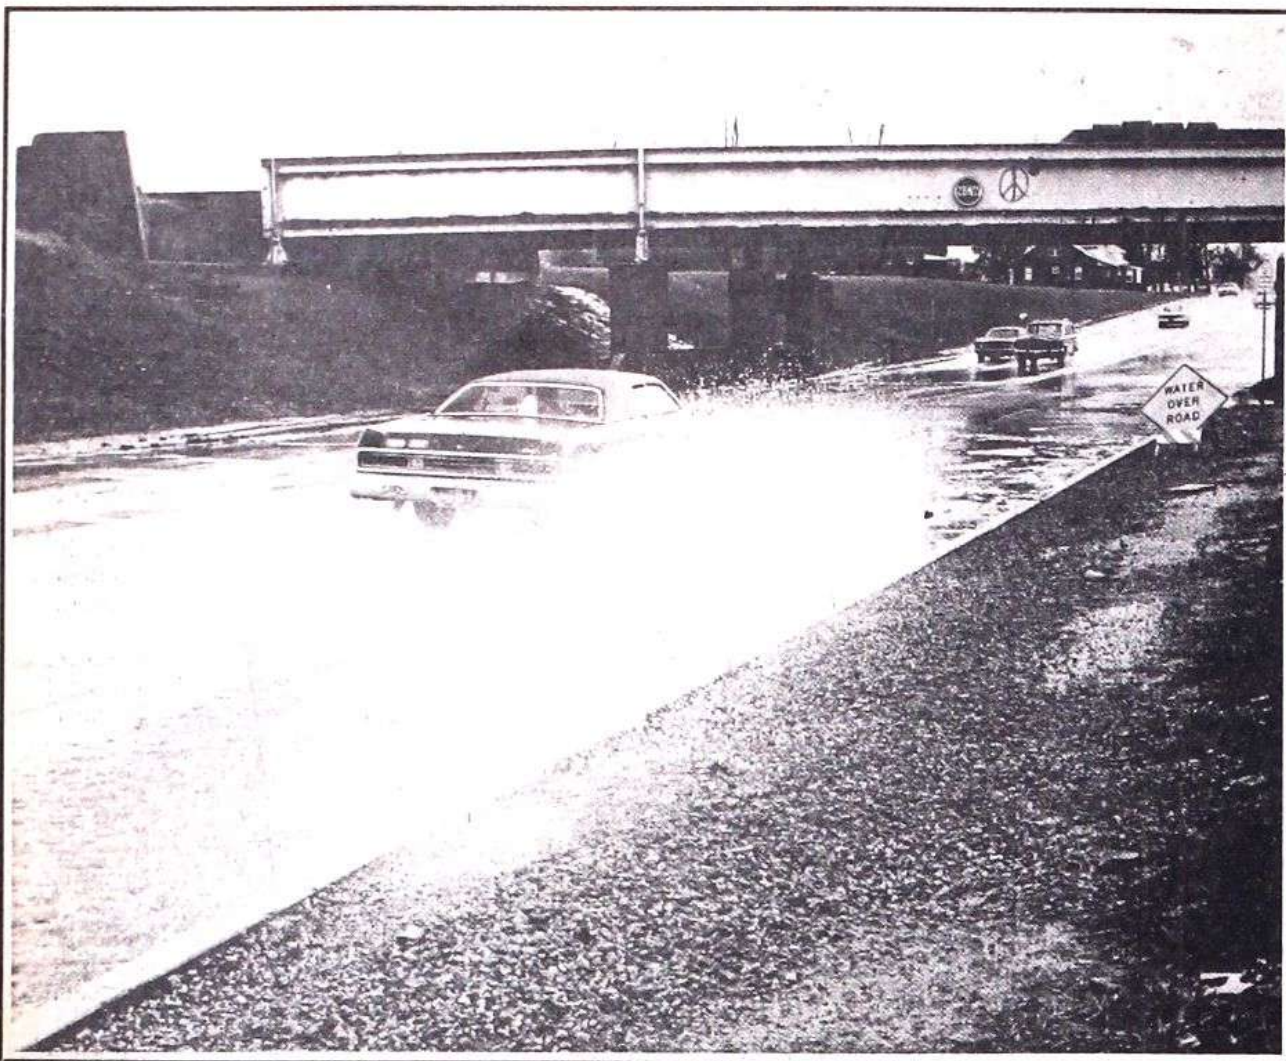

Patrolman Thomas Koval confirmed this, stating that two people had come to the police station Saturday regarding the procedure of getting a gun.

The murder of Dixie Cobb was the first of its kind since Aug. 24, 1980 when John Golebioski, 61, a truck farmer, was slain in his home on Van Horn Road by two assailants: Charles Saches, 24, of Gibraltar, and Michael Sindoni, 24, of Woodhaven.

But Golebioski was slain by two unknown men from other towns who had entered his home on a breaking-and-entering motive.

But the murder of Dixie Cobb was different. It seemed cold-blooded and chilling.

"I lived in this Township when you didn't have to lock your doors," said Harold Bader, 56, life-time resident and general foreman of Detroit Edison. "I guess that's what progress does."

And the rains came...

Torrential rains that fell in the area and Southeastern Michigan Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning flooded streets and expressways, triggering a "red alert" by the State Police. Police warned motorists to stay off many of the expressways, the first such warning in recent years, because of the excessive waters. In some spots the water reached over 3 feet. Although there were no serious accidents reportedly locally, the rains continued to cause havoc for motorists heading for work yesterday morning.

'Reinforcement' is key word in Huron math programs

Reinforcement. That is the word that seems to sum up a salient trait of the math program adopted by the Huron School District.

"It provides a lot more drill, a lot more practice, and a lot more problem solving than other texts we have used," said Tina Factor, sixth grade teacher at Renton Junior High.

Factor was a key figure on the committee which studied the possibilities of programs.

The program from Health Publishing Company, will be used for the instruction of math in grades K-8.

She noted that a pre-test and a post-test will be given at the end of each unit lesson as a part of the program. This will be done on a monthly basis.

This technique will help determine what level each student is working on, Factor said, and to find out what the student is lacking.

As for the method of teaching?

"It is traditional and it provides a variety of ways to stress the 'back to basics' ", Factor said.

"It also provides enrichment for those students who are gifted. It goes a step beyond the old math books."

Factor also noted that the teachers will be sending "letters" home periodically with the students, inviting the parents to get involved in math exercises, like measuring a room or playing a math game with the children.

The program was also adopted by Gibraltar School District recently.

Serving on the advisory committee with Factor to select the material were Shirley Bright and Rose Matuszak, also elementary school math teachers; and Mary Garbarino, Huron High math teacher; and Bill Balwinsky, Renton Junior High principal.

Rawsonville picks history essay winner

Doing some research for fifth grader Bradley Byrd paid off this semester as he was declared the winner in the annual Rawsonville Essay Contest.

This year's contest theme centered on the school and its surrounding history. The contest was open to fifth and sixth graders.

"I was very surprised to win the contest," Bradley said. "When my name was called as the winner at our Honors Assembly, I really didn't believe it. I am very proud that my name will be on the school's plaque."

Bradley said he found the information for the essay using books at the local library and researching the newspapers.

Vote is 6-0

Huron OK's school budget

By JERRY DESHARNAIS
(Special ANP Writer)

A $6,076,811 budget was approved 6-0 by the Huron School Board last week.

An operating millage of 29.47 mills, and 7.46 mills for debt retirement were approved to finance the budget, for a total millage of 36.93 mills for 1983-84 school year.

It was announced at the meeting that a threatened loss of revenue, about $100,000, was avoided when the Trenton Public Schools recently elected to allow Huron Schools to continue to run their senior citizens adult education program.

The Downriver school system notified Huron school officials Friday, June 17, of their decision.

Both Huron and Southgate schools were competing for the responsibility, which would mean added income from state revenue.

Huron belongs to a consortium, and administers adult education programs for other school districts. Since Huron is a low-income district, for every four adult ed students it puts on its school rolls in other districts, it gets from the State the equivalent state aid of one student, or $1,919.

There are about 50 Full-Time-Equivalent (FTE) students in the Trenton senior citizens adult ed. This means Huron School District will get $95,950 in state revenue.

In other business, the Board opened five bids regarding the purchase of school buses. Each bid opened was consecutively lower than the previous bid. The Board will act on the bids at a future meeting.

The texts for the mathematics program, published by the Health Publishing Co. were recommended to the Board and approved unanimously.

The texts will be used in grades K-8 and will cost $11,725.

The books will be paid for from the revenue of the school's la carte lunch program. Each child will be provided with his or her own textbook.

The same math text was adopted by the Gibraltar School System.

Three individuals received the Distinguished Service Award from the School District at the meeting:

— Julie Cook, Home Economics teacher for 12½ years, resigning;

— Frances Balowsky, custodian for 25 years, retiring;

— Bill Manny, school board trustee for five years, and varsity baseball coach, resigning.

A certificate of recognition to the Fourth Grade Students of Miller Elementary school for outstanding performance in reading and mathematics has been awarded, it was announced at the meeting.

The award was given by the Department of Education, State of Michigan for the student performance on the Michigan Education Assessment Program Test, given last October.

Principal William Miller of Miller Elementary said it is the second consecutive year that the students have been given the award for performance on that test.

The certificate is awarded to those buildings where at least 75% of the students attained 75% of the minimal objectives tested.

In fact, the students scored higher than last year, Miller noted, achieving an 83% in reading.

At the end of the meeting, Shirley Burgess, elected to the school board June 13 in her first run for public office, was sworn in by Trustee and Secretary of the Board Kathy Dregansky.

Burgess, also Supervisor of Transportation in the Gibraltar School District, replaces Bill Man-ny who retired his position after serving five years on the Board.

Manny was asked about his school board experience:

"I guess there always are going to be ups and downs on a school board," he said. "I guess my greatest disappointment is the funding for schools — the State really controls the funding."

"The highlight on the Board was almost the first meeting or so," he continued, "when we adopted the closed campus. I think it helped clean up our school system, it brought discipline back into the school and I think we have some fine people in this district."

"I think Mrs. Burgess, who I have known for many years, is a fine lady. She was a terrific driver. She'll make a fine board member."

Also sworn in at the meeting was Jim W. Pershing, the President of the Board, who is starting his fourth consecutive term.

Area students named to WSU dean's list

Two Belleville and a Romulus student were named this week to the Wayne State University's coveted Dean's List.

The recipients of the accolades from Belleville are Julia J.F. Bartkowiak and Kathleen M.L. Bradley, while the Romulus resident is Robin Lynn Hoag.

Over 1,000 of the 13,000 undergraduate students in Wayne State's College of Liberal Arts were named to the list. To be eligible for the honor, students taking 12 or more credit hours must have a grade point average of 3.6.

Those students taking six to 11 credit hours must have a 4.0 grade point average.

Council approves resolution

Romulus link in Super Sewer

Romulus will be a link in the proposed $294 million super sewer project.

After hearing a recommendation from Dave Paul, Department of Public Works director, and John Breen, Wayne County Department of Public Works, council agreed to put aside approximately $170,000 for its projected share of the project.

Voting against the project was councilman Jimmie Raspberry while his colleague, John Lewkowicz, abstained. Voting "yes" were Mayor Pro Tem, Mary Ann Banks, councilmen Barry Baumann, Pete Bergeron and Fred Junior Block.

Paul had informed council that the "super sewer" would eliminate the Hannan Rd. Pump Station, thereby, solving one of the city's major problems. The station pumps raw sewage underground through a conduit and if flooding occurs, sewage could back up and surface.

Breen needed assurance that the city would bound itself to the terms of the Huron Valley Wastewater Control System financing. He was in the council chambers during last Wednesday's special meeting to ask council to adopt a resolution that would bind the city to the agreement.

That resolution, in part, reads: "...local units of government... have joined together to plan and design and construct certain sewerage facilities commonly known as the Huron Valley Wastewater Control system... and it is vitally necessary for the health safety and welfare of the residents to be served by the system.

"And, in order that the construction of the facilities be accomplished, Wayne County will need to obtain necessary Federal and State grant monies... and as a precondition of obtaining grant funding, it is necessary that parties enter into an agreement necessary for the funding, building and operation of the proposed system in accordance with the applicable federal regulation...

"Therefore be it the city of Romulus agrees to be bound by the terms of the Huron Valley Wastewater Control System Financing, construction and operating contract."

Raspberry said he voted against entering into the agreement for several reasons.

"The other communities are getting into the project because they have some severe problems with their present system," Raspberry said, "and they have no other way out. We are not in that position."

"And I can't justify this cost. Council also has made no provision where they will get this money from. I feel that when a city is going to spend money, it ought to know where that money is coming from and offer to tell the people that information," Raspberry added.

Lewkowicz said that he abstained "because I feel that we should not make this commitment at this time. We are, after all, faced with a deadline to pay back the sewer debt retirement fund and I don't want to see us get tangled into other sewers before we clean up the mess we're in."

2 holdouts are jeopardizing the project

The future of the $294 million super sewer project and its 5,000 jobs hinges on the ability of Wayne County's acting DPW director, Duane Egeland, to convince two hold-out communities — Flat Rock and Wixom — to join twelve others in signing participation contracts before the Friday midnight deadline.

Wayne County Commissioners, Thursday, agreed by a one-vote margin, to co-sign each of the contracts which would, in effect, guarantee completion of the project if any one of the communities default in paying their share of the costs.

The contracts, and co-signature of the county, were requirements the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) established before they would agree to certify the three-phase project.

Super sewer runs roughly from Commerce Township in Oakland County, south 60 miles along the western border of Wayne County to the Detroit River. Thus far Commerce Township and Novi (Oakland County), Northville, Plymouth, Canton, Van Buren, Huron, Brownstown Townships, Romulus, S. Rockwood (Monroe County), Woodhaven and Gibraltar have all signed contracts while Flat Rock and Wixom have still not signed as of Friday noon. Mayor Pro-Tem, Terry Byrd, of Flat Rock, Thursday, said he would vote against the contract if it increased his city's obligation. Egeland denied that it would, and planned to meet with him before the city's 7:30 council meeting Friday. Steve Bonczek, assistant to the Wixom Mayor, said he was almost certain the Wixom council would vote for the contract during its meeting also scheduled at 7:30 Friday.

Egeland said the project started to unravel June 1st when the DNR refused to accept resolutions of intent prepared by each of the communities. "They (DNR) said they wanted contracts not resolutions," Egeland explained, "and were ready to cut and run with our money to Muskegon and Lansing. It took the combined efforts of Congressmen John D. Dingell, William D. Ford and the governor's office to convince the DNR to give us until June 24 to redo the contracts."

"It isn't simply a matter of money," he continued. "The DNR wants participation of all of the communities in order to solve the pollution problem. It's their opinion that if they don't all participate then we aren't going to solve the problems."

According to Egeland the feds have already given the County $75 million for Phase I and Congressional Authorization for an additional $46.296 million for Phase II and $75 million for Phase III. The fourteen communities, combined, will provide $37.491 million for Phase I; $26.662 million, Phase II; and $32.351 million for Phase III.

"The project could be completed without Phase III funds," Egeland said, "by reducing the size of the interceptors, so money, right now, is not the hangup, it's the DNR which is under pressure to take the project money and spend it out-state. They claim we are getting a disproportionate share of federal funds. We claim we haven't had a fair share for the past ten years." Don Ringler, Oakland County Engineer in charge of that portion of the project, agreed.

At Riverside Elementary

Arson ruled as cause of fire

Arson has been determined as the cause of the fire at Riverside Elementary School in Huron last Friday.

Huron Fire Chief Frank Marvaso, who was at the scene at Middle belt and Huron River Drive, said an incendiary device was used to start the fire.

Smoke damage to three or four classrooms, some structural damage and some damage to the roof of the school were caused by the blaze.

Fire Stations #1 and #3 responded to the alarm, around 6:45 p.m. About 25 voluntary fire personnel were called to the scene.

Two-fire pumpers, two rescue vehicles, and a 55-foot tele-squirt vehicle were used to bring the fire under control within a half hour.

The damaged classrooms are adjacent to the school gymnasium. No one was in the building at the time of the fire. School has been out for more than two weeks.

Fire Chief Marvaso made no estimate of the cost of the damage.

Marvaso said the fire is still under investigation and that anyone with information can call 753-4411.

Commissioners Laud Pittmans action

Two Wayne County Commissioners against placement of former Undersheriff Loren Pittman as Director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness had praise last week for both the new county structure and Pittman when his resignation was announced.

Commissioners John C. Hertel and Milton Mack, speaking at a special meeting of the Committee of the Whole convened solely to decide legislative response to Pittman's dubious appointment, said Pittman and County Executive William Lucas "conducted themselves with dignity and honor."

Mack said this means of resolving the conflict that arose between the County Commission and the CEO could not have occurred under the old form of county government lacking a chief executive officer with central authority.

Huron, police set on wages

A tentative agreement has been reached between Huron Township and the Huron Township Police Officers Association following a meeting Wednesday between negotiators under a state mediator.

A 2% retroactive raise from April '82 to April '83, and a 5% raise from April '83 to April '84 were agreed to during the 2½-hour session in Taylor.

If this agreement is approved by the Huron Township Board, it would complete the three-year contract which expires April 1984.

State Mediator Tom Badoud presided over the negotiation session. Rich Zeigler, Teamster's representative, and Patrolman John Cady of the policemen's union, handled the police negotiations.

Richard James, Township Attorney; Supervisor A.J. Haener, and Clerk Mary Lou Carey and Treasurer Chris Gamber represented the Township.

"I am pleased with this," said John Cady, "if the Board goes along with this we would be more than happy with the settlement."

Huron debates application of federal grant

By JERRY DESHARNAIS
(Special ANP Writer)

More federal money may be made available for the Huron till — how to spend it sparked a debate at the regular Township Board, meeting last week.

The federal government announced recently it is providing 80% matching funds for the specific purpose of creating jobs on community projects such as renovation of public buildings and any public improvements.

Most grants from the federal government are not intended for improvement of public buildings. According to Township Clerk Mary Lou Carey this is only the second time since 1971 that a grant like this has materialized.

Considerable discussion last Wednesday revolved around one option proposed, to buy the Glenn Building and Bowling Alley as a new site for Township Hall and garage.

Sentiment was generally against this, some claiming it would cost more to renovate the building than the proponents claimed.

As a matter of priority, most of the Board and Supervisor A.J. Haener were in favor of replacement of the waterline, some 6,013 feet which would require $290,062 to replace.

As a compromise, the Board finally decided to file two applications: one for the total waterline replacement in New Boston which would cost $290,062, and the second for the renovation of the current Township Hall which would require $100,000.

It was agreed that the waterline application would be stipulated as the priority item.

If both applications for the job project grant were approved by the Economic Development Administration (EDA), the 20% in funds from the Township would come from a current Block Grant Fund of $86,000 now in the works for waterline work on Ellis Street.

In other business, a motion by Trustee Bill Greierman to give Supervisor Haener authorization to get the specifications for a DPW building to be built on the current firehall and dog pound site on Sterling Street in New Boston was approved.

In other matters, Township Attorney Dick James submitted the ordinance on regulation of the New Boston flea market and the Board indicated approval. It will be put on the agenda of the next meeting.

Township Engineer Jerry Jarrett reported to the Board that all of the permits have been received regarding the replacement of the Ellis Street watermain.

Supervisor Haener, in his report, recommended that Huron Township join in a mutual lawsuit with other Townships against Wayne County concerning the sharing of cost of the dust-proofing or chloriding of roads.

The Board agreed and passed a resolution in support.

Haener commented that in the event the lawsuit fails, it will be necessary to suggest to the citizens a special assessment to take care of dust-proofing.

The target of the lawsuit is a 50% assessment that townships have to pay for the treatment.

A proposal to participate in a Wayne County Alcohol Enforcement exercise, involving the use of local officers on an overtime basis, was rejected.

The project concerns a $300,000 grant to Wayne County to perform surveillance of alcoholic driving on certain roads. The task force would be headquartered in Belleville.

Opponents cited the cost of wear-and-tear on local officers and their cars which would be involved in the enforcement work outside of Huron community.

The vote was 5-1, Treasurer Chris Gamber opposing the rejection.

Clerk Mary Lou Carey asked the Board to consider the purchase of a $30,000-plus computer to handle water payments billings.

The Clerk said the payments could be made over a period of five years. She advised the Board that the current computer hardware is outmoded and worn.

Participation from the audience near the end of the meeting was considerable, lasting almost an hour.

Peter Glaab, a New Boston businessman, spoke for almost 20 minutes, sometimes eloquently, regarding the approach of the Township government toward the community of New Boston.

In a sense, it was a continuation of the debate which had preceded during the regular meeting.

Glaab scored the Board for not taking a leadership role in revitalizing the urban section of New Boston and cited as an example the reluctance of the Board to purchase the Glenn Building.

Glaab's speech, containing some exhortations not without sting, brought some reply from the Board, namely from Trustee Gary Bates, himself a businessman and also president of the Huron Chamber of Commerce. He is opposed to the Glenn purchase because he believes it too costly for remodeling, claiming that Glaab's estimates were far too conservative.

Their division on the matter put two philosophies stemming from the same background in sharp contrast.

But the greatest sparks were to come from another resident, Bill Carter, who moved to Huron Township within the past six months with his wife Emily and three children.

Carter castigated the Supervisor and the Board for almost a half hour over an incident which occurred that afternoon.

Carter said that a dog had entered his backyard, located on Waltz Road, foaming at the mouth, apparently mad.

He called for assistance and a police officer came and killed the animal with a shot to the head.

Carter then inquired what would be done with the carcass and the officer advised him to bury it.

Instead, Carter made a series of calls to the Township Hall to get someone to take the dead animal away.

Around 4:30 p.m., Carter said he got through to Supervisor Haener and he replied that he could not send out an animal control officer because he could not afford to pay the overtime.

The full-time animal control officer position was eliminated in April as a cost-effective move. Its duties are now handled on a part-time basis by an employee of the Water Department.

The Supervisor advised Carter to move the carcass out to the road so it would be picked up in the morning.

This apparently sparked the outburst by Carter at the Township meeting.

It was after about 20 minutes of Carter's verbal broadside of the Supervisor and the Board that Trustee John Pushkar suggested that perhaps the animal should be removed that evening.

Treasurer Gamber confirmed that approach and the Board voted it to be done, and to pick up a dead goat as well which Carter had been complaining about in phone calls the past few weeks. The dead goat was in a wooded area of some adjoining land.

This resolution quieted Carter who then commented that he didn't mean to use such strong language and he was glad his wife had cautioned him to be calm before the meeting.

This provoked a roar from the Board and the audience.

The Board then adjourned to executive session.

Wineman is asking the court to declare the city's zoning ordinance, as amended, and as it now applies to the land is "unreasonable, confiscatory, illegal, void, unconstitutional and of no force and effect."

The complaint also states that it is asking the court "to enjoin the defendant (the city), its officers, agents and employees from enforcing the City's Zoning Ordinance, as amended, insofar as it restricts the use of Plaintiff's land to single family residential purposes."

Wineman also is asking the court "to declare that the plaintiff is entitled to use land as provided in the RMH (residential mobile home) Zoning District and enjoin any attempt to legislate or interfere with such use of the land by the defendant, its agent, officers or employees."

No date has been set to hear the suit.

Meals are offered to senior citizens

Birthday cake and ice cream, but without the candles, is featured once a month along with veal parmesan, barbequed chicken, baked pork chops, Brunswick stew, Salisbury steak smothered in onions, to name a few of the different meals and none repeated during the five day a week, four weeks or monthly menu schedule of the Out-Wayne County Human Services, Inc. Potatoes au gratin, carrot raisin salad or spinach salad, harvard beets, corn or bran muffins are some of the accompaniments that help balanced the meal from scratch meals served on a daily basis at 27 different sites in Western Wayne County around the noon hour.

If birthday cake isn't featured that day as dessert, then it may be a lemon tart, butterscotch pudding, pumpkin pie, fresh fruits or cookies for the end of a warm and tasty meal.

Menus are changed monthly and are part of the Senior Nutrition Program which offers completely balanced meals at no or little cost for citizens ages 60 or over.

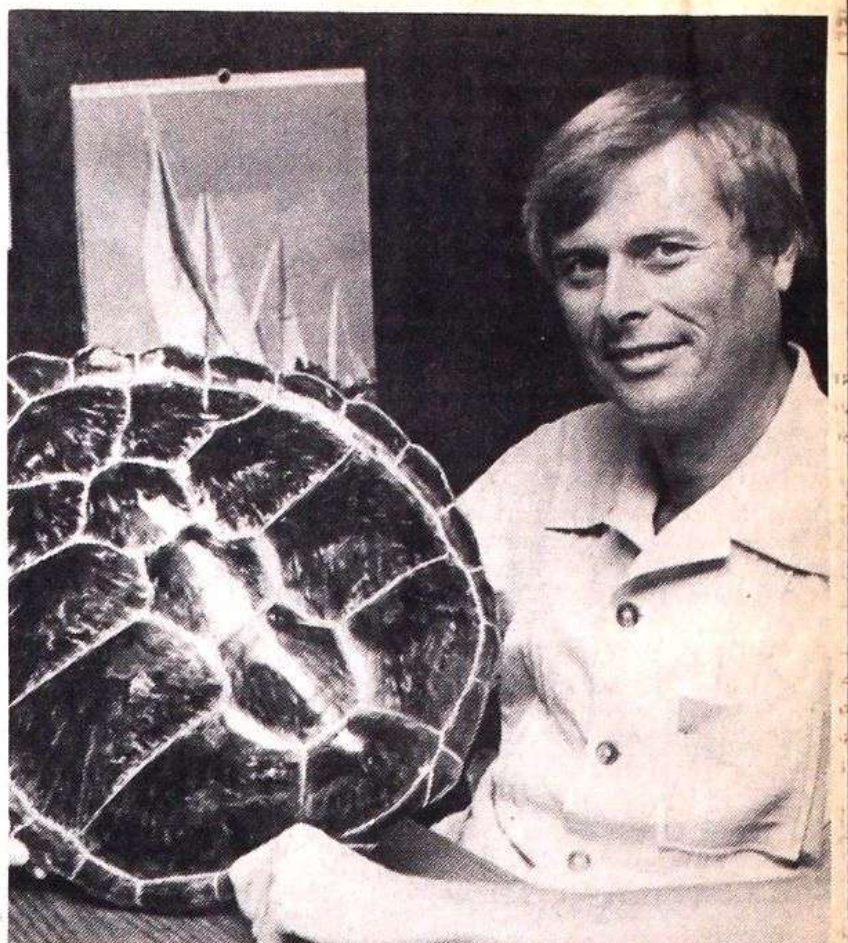

To participate in the daily noon luncheon program especially targeted for older citizens, all that is required is to call the site 24 hours before, appear on the scene at the lunch hour and enjoy the good food and company.

There is no charge for the meals, but individuals may make a contribution which is suggested at 75¢.

Besides offering a nutrition-packed meal at no or little cost the program is also designed to bring older citizens out of their homes on a regular basis where they can meet others and become involved in senior citizen activities. Most of the sites are located in senior citizen centers or facilities where a host of interesting activities also are available.

Along with good food diners can also enjoy craft classes, trips, sing-alongs, exercise classes, blood pressure checks, income tax services and mystery trips - to name a few of these constructive activities. Lunch offered by Out-Wayne County Human Services Inc. is a fine opportunity to make friends as you dip down for another fork full of mashed potatoes.

For additional information please call Romulus Senior Center at 941-0666 or Out-Wayne County Human Services Inc. at 422-2602.

Two young men were apprehended by Huron Township police during a break-in at Renton Junior High School last Wednesday.

Jason Ciotti, 19, and Gregory Cretul, 20, both of Taylor, were arrested by Officers John Cady and Eugene Kean at the scene, about 5 a.m.

The suspects had entered the building through a window and forced themselves into the principal's office, according to Sgt. John Maier.

About $20 in money and some watches from the lost-and-found box were taken, Maier said.

Cady and Kean were in their patrol car and responded to an alarm triggered when the suspects entered the office.

The two men were taken to Wayne County Jail and booked for breaking and entering.

Canton hikes water rates

Two hefty increases in water rates are anticipated in Canton Township, one beginning as early as this summer.

According to Township Finance Director Mike Gorman, the township can no longer continue to fund a portion of the cost of water and sewer treatment for township residents. He explained that since 1979, the City of Detroit, which supplies water and sewer capacity to Canton, has increased rates in increments totaling 57 cents per every thousand gallons. According to Gorman, only 2 cents of those increases has been placed on residents' bills, with the township paying the 55 cents of accumulated cost increase on every thousand gallons of water used.

This procedure has cost the township to date, Gorman estimated, nearly $1.6 million which has been taken from a reserve water fund earmarked for future water and sewer lines in the township and for replacement and repair of any main breaks.

The increase, according to Gorman, will amount to an average water bill of $330 per year for residents, compared to the $240 they pay now for the average consumption of about 130,000 gallons during the year. The rate should increase, if the township board approves the action, from the present $1.85 per thousand gallons to $2.54 per thousand gallons.

"The board does have options," Gorman said. "They could continue to absorb the cost using other revenues, or they could assume that consumption will increase and thereby lower the cost the township is incurring." Gorman surmised, however, that the increase to the homeowner would be the logical action for board members to take.

Gorman further commented that Canton homeowners will be facing another increase in both water and sewer rates with the approval of the Super Sewer project resolution by members of the Township Board of Trustees Tuesday evening at a special meeting.

Holiday coolers

Plenty of thirst-quenching beverages have top priority for warm weather gatherings, and for sheer convenience and good taste, a handy canister of Country Time lemonade flavor drink mix is the answer to on-the-spot liquid refreshment. With its own taste reminiscent of old-fashioned lemonade, it is a great mixer with other juices — apricot nectar, cranberry juice cocktail, grape juice or instant tea. Add ice and carbonated soda to bring out the brisk, fruity flavors.

For a spirited occasion mix up a large pitcherful of Sparkly Punch, a Sangria-type drink made with lemonade flavor drink mix, red wine, ginger ale and slices of lemon, lime and orange. Serve it over ice for a light, cooling beverage that's perfect for seasonal entertaining.

Sparkly Punch

- 2 cups red wine
- ½ cup water
- 2 scoops lemonade flavor drink mix
- 4 lemon slices
- 4 lime slices
- 4 orange slices
- 1 bottle (12 fl. oz.) ginger ale, chilled

Combine wine, water and drink mix in a pitcher; stir until drink mix is dissolved. Add fruit and chill well. Just before serving, add ginger ale. Serve over ice, if desired. Makes 4 cups or 8 servings. Note: Recipe may be doubled.

Grape-Apple Cooler

- 6 scoops (1½ cups minus 2 tablespoons) lemonade flavor drink mix
- 6 cups white grape juice
- 2¼ cups apple juice
- 1 bottle (12 fl. oz.) club soda, chilled lemon, lime and orange slices

Combine drink mix, grape juice and apple juice in a large pitcher. Stir to dissolve drink mix and chill well. Just before serving, add soda and fruit. Serve over ice. Makes 2¼ quarts or 18 servings.

Saxon, Dugan exchange June vows at Holy Trinity Chapel

Holy Trinity Chapel in Ypsilanti was reserved June 25 for the afternoon ceremony which joined Mary Clare Dugan, RN, and Keith Gordon Saxon, MD, in holy matrimony.

Presiding at the four o'clock rite were The Rev. John A. Cairns of the First Community Church in Columbus, O. and The Rev. Donald McAllister, Chaplain at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor.

The double ring vows were witnessed by some 140 relatives and friends including the young couple's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph V. Dugan of Ellis Street, New Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Saxon of Hastings Drive, Richmond, Va.

Music for the occasion included "Our Father" and "Ave Maria" sung by Susan Beckman and Katherine Fink with Bradley Brookshire playing organ accompaniment.

In keeping with the color scheme of the wedding, sprays of teal blue and aqua silk roses and white satin bows accented the two brass candelabras which each held nine white tapers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a white satin gown which drifted into a chapel-length train accented with ruffles and lace roses at the hemline. The little fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline of embroidered Alencon lace and pearls and long bishop sleeves with removable gauntlets. Using a picture for guidelines, the dress was fashioned and was made by the bride's cousin, Amy Gibson of Grosse Ile, who also made the bridal veil. Attached to a close-fitting Camelot cap of embroidered Alencon lace and pearl beading, the silk illusion creation was cut in fingertip length.

Completing her bridal finery was a cascade bouquet of silk white gardenias, white, teal blue and aqua roses, pastel blue star flowers, stephanotis and baby's breath framed with English ivy. All the silk flower designs were created by a family friend, Mrs. Glen Bretnier of Carleton.

The bride asked her sister, Anne Catherine Dugan, RD, to be maid of honor and the bridegroom's sister, Nancy Jo Saxon, RN, of Richmond, Va. and Sharon Amor, RN, and Joann Cahill, RN, both of Ann Arbor, to be bridesmaids.

Identically dressed, their outfits included round-necked white blouses with ruffle-trimmed lace yokes and lace-cuffed short sleeves. Their teal blue taffeta skirts in toe-touching length were complimented by white crocheted gloves and bouquets which were smaller versions of the bride's flowers.

Gordon Saxon served as his son's best man with the groomsmen including Lorne S. Label, MD, of Los Angeles, Calif. and Henry Ho, MD, and Robert Mazzeo, MD, both of Ann Arbor.

MRS. KEITH G. SAXON

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Dugan selected a formal pastel green gown, and white accessories while the bridegroom's mother donned a long blue-green gown with shoes and bag to match. Both were honored with corsages of silk roses and rosebuds.

Also presented with flowers was the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Bert Geren, who chose a pale blue formal gown for the occasion.

Some 160 guests gathered at the Grosse Ile Golf and Country Club for the reception which followed after which the newlyweds departed for a two week honeymoon in New York and North Carolina. On completion of their trip they will make their home in Liberty, Mo. near Kansas City where Dr. Saxon is going into private practice in head and neck surgery.

The new Mrs. Saxon, who holds a BSN degree from Eastern Michigan University and an MSN degree from Wayne State University, recently resigned as supervisor of the intensive care unit at Chelsea Community Hospital due to relocating.

Her husband earned his BA degree at the University of Texas at Austin and his MD degree at the University of Texas Medical School in San Antonio. He completed his internship in general surgery at the M.D. Anderson and Hermann Hospital in Houston; his general surgery residency at St. Josh Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor; and his residency in otolaryngology, head and neck surgery at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor where he also was an adjunct assistant professor in the U-M School of Music.

An affiliate of Alpha Omega Alpha, he was previously employed at the University of Michigan.

The rehearsal dinner at Weber's Inn of Ann Arbor was hosted by the bridegroom's parents.

Quotes worth quoting . . .

"The first 40 years of life give us the text; the next 30 supply the commentary on it."
Schopenhauer said it.

potpourri

By Lee Smith
Suburban Living Editor

The day is Tuesday, June 21, and truly the longest day of the year since I'm navigating on Chicago time, heading for Ann Arbor time and am on board a train that's already an hour late. Confusing? Frustrating and tiring to boot since it's a day I need extra time; not less!

A bright, cloudless sky, somewhat dulled by the grimey tinted glass through which I'm looking, it appears to be the scorcher predicted. Not having been outdoors since early morn, I can only assume I'm much cooler here than at the Kiwanis-Rotary wives golf outing I'm missing "back home."

I had a taste of commuter-itis today — that infection which strikes those near rapid transit systems and lingers throughout a 9-to-5 phase of life as long as that mode of transportation is available and necessary.

I learned the 7:58 out of Glenview scoops up its mass of humanity in mere minutes and a prospective passenger wasted no time with prolonged hugs for a daughter and grandson. I soon realized I should have sought out the non-smoking car since polluted eyes, ears, noses, throats, hair, clothing seemed a prerequisite for card playing and early edition perusing in the section I'd chosen.

My penchant for being on time resulted in my being in line (ahead of time) with dozens of other eastern-bound travelers waiting for the 9:05 out of Union Depot. No sooner had we formed at gate 22 when we were informed we'd be departing late, on track 18, on a "different train." "D.T." then took an aggravating 45 minutes to materialize — with no explanations whatsoever from staffers.

I've since questioned the conductor about the delay and several other items learning that (1) an air conditioning malfunction was the problem (2) that stocking the club car took even more time (3) that speed limits for trains caused our almost pedestrian progress through small towns (4) that our backed-in arrival in Kalamazoo was due to our being on an alternate route (5) and, lastly, that "A.R." meant crews were repairing the roadbeds along the usual trail.

In all, it's added up to 60 additional minutes of numbness (a sitting malady from which I suffer) and equal waiting time for Daughter "M" who's meeting my train.

Were it not for being behind by several days (at home), having an early deadline (at work) and needing to pack for a trip (up North), I'd not mind this delay. I enjoy train travel — it's clean, cool, interesting, could be relaxing, and, above all, there's leg room plus privacy (no seatmate, most appreciated since I've this "potpourri" to compose.)

I'm finding it awfully hard to concentrate on writing however since I'd much rather just daydream or crack that paperback at my side. It's refreshing, too, to see the countryside in all its summer splendor, unlike my previous Amtrak venture in early February when my route was punctuated with unsightly litter, murky ditches and a dingy, rain-blurred view.

My seat with northern exposure provides me with one picturesque scene after another — neat farms with their vast acreage contrasting with minuscule gardens on wee city lots and pretty patchwork plots in the suburbs; black and white dairy herds dotting hillsides with old weathered barns for backdrops; bales of hay rolled to resemble giant-sized portions of crunchy shredded wheat.

Tree-lined brooks and the Norman Rockwell charm of an old swimming hole vie in quaintness while proud old Victorian and Italiante houses contrast with sad, once-elegant mansions now in states of disrepair or abandonment.

Riots of peonies, overwhelming in their abundance, provide "color" for my journey as does Nature with her aiseways of roses and other flowering bushes gone wild. Members of her weed family add their purples, pinks, whites, yellows and oranges to the kaleidoscope.

Ponds with their rafts of floating lily pads; little kids taking time from their play to wave happily at the train; mothers and their little ones picnicking in community parks, fishermen lining the banks of adjacent streams all add up to a lazy summer day.

Elkhart, Indiana (new because of the re-routing) showed off its Central High School campus, knowing we'd be hard put to find anything along the line to compare with its endless tennis courts, professional football stadium, well-groomed grounds and modern architecture.

Battle Creek (Kellogg's own) also offered a new look with its recently-opened large, clean railroad station — an aesthetic contrast to its once-splendid counterpart, now a mere shabby shadow of its former self.

People-watching is at a minimum this time since the tall-backed seats block out faces but most folks appear to be destined for Michigan's vacation-time attractions. Tennis rackets, backpacks and golf clubs seem to accessorize an abundance of shorts-jeans-mini outfits. A trio of little girls, who boarded just ahead of me, are targeted for "grandma's" since I overheard their dad instructing them to "kiss grandma for me."

The train staff is friendly and helpful, the carton of milk and cup of coffee I just polished off with my brown bag lunch was icy cold and blisteringly hot, respectively, and despite the hectic schedule that awaits me, I'm able to sit back and through what my eye is beholding, actually "take time to smell the flowers".

TIME TO SMILE

One day the parents sent their sons in to see their pastor because the boys were always in trouble. The pastor called the eldest, Timmy, into his study. He asked, "Timmy, do you know where God is?"

Timmy jumped down from his chair and ran out the door. "What's the matter?" his brother, Jimmy, asked. To which Timmy replied, "God is missing and they think we took Him!"

THE BOTTOM LINE: God wisely designed the human body so that man can neither pat his own back nor kick himself too easily.

Have a fun-filled 4th but make it a safe one!

Methodists honor pastor and wife

The First United Methodist Church of Belleville was the scene of a 30th wedding anniversary reception for the pastor, Rev. George Spencer and his wife, Sharon, after services on Sunday, May 15. Salads, made and brought to the church by various members of the congregation, formed the basis for the luncheon festivities.

Lay Leader, Dick Carey, acted as master of ceremonies and presented the Spencers with a beautiful mantel clock, a gift from the congregation. Kathy Rairick, a member of the congregation, sang "Oh Perfect Love", which had been sung at the Spencer's wedding, and "Perhaps Love".

The Spencer's table at the reception was decorated with an arrangement of roses and the other tables with small potted plants. One of the Spencer's wedding pictures was also displayed. The piece de resistance was an elaborate 4-tiered, pillared wedding cake made by Nancy Carey, Wynne Ann Marosi and Karen Carlson.

The Spencers were married May 17, 1953, at Lincoln Park United Methodist Church in Flint. Chaplain Eli Richard presided after which a reception was held at the church.

The Belleville Enterprise and The Romulus Roman offer bridal questionnaires for you to fill out as well as engagement forms for announcing the "start of it all." These forms include all the pertinent questions involved with your marriage or betrothal.

Forms may be picked up at our office, 116 Fourth St., Belleville, anytime during the week between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. We will also mail forms if a telephone request is made. Call Lee Smith, Suburban Living Editor, at 697-9191.

Short subjects

This summer include a hearty, satisfying and budget-stretching beef pot-roast in your cookout repertoire. It's easy to achieve tender, delicious results following these special grilling techniques.

First, place a beef chuck arm, blade or 7-bone pot-roast in a cooking bag; tie bag, leaving an opening for venting at closure. Then wrap securely in heavy duty aluminum foil, folding edges to seal. Place on grill and cook at low to moderate heat until done, turning occasionally. If desired, when the meat is done, remove from bag and briefly broil over the coals to pick up that special charcoal flavor.

Whether you catch fish in a lake or at the supermarket, remember that the easiest and tastiest tartar sauce starts with creamy smooth dairy sour cream. Add chopped pickle relish and a dash of Tabasco sauce.

Now that's service!

All you have to do is stop in or call. And, your Citizens agent will be happy to discuss the protection of the people, places and things you value most. And, there's no obligation. It's like getting...

...peace of mind for free!

They weren't here to do it themselves — spread the news of their brand new (and first) grandchild — but the local "grapevine" did it for Belleville-Van Buren Chamber of Commerce Director Leona Van Buhler and her husband, Ray, over the weekend of the Annual Strawberry Festival.

The new grandmother, who also serves as secretary for the festival committee, had a pretty legitimate reason for missing the local festivities, we'd say, since she and the new grand-dad took off for the East Coast shortly after getting that important, long-awaited phone call on June 11.

"It's a boy!" was the announcement made by their daughter and son-in-law, Gwen and John Cleary of 125 Pond St., Wakefield, R.I., who were at South County Hospital in Wakefield for the delivery.

The new heir, who was titled "Patrick Ryan", bowed in at 3:40 p.m., weighed 8 lbs. 8 ozs. and measured 21½ inches.

His proud paternal grandparents are Eugene and Jean Cleary of Greenwich, Conn. and his mom is the former Gwen Van Buhler.

Q. & A. —

Q. It's infuriating! Something is nibbling on my tomatoes from the bottom. I go to pick up a nice ripe, red tomato and find the bottom's gone and the insides are all mushy. More often than not, the fruit's full of those little yellow-spotted black beetles. Are they the culprits?

A. The beetles are sap beetles, also known as picnic beetles for their habit of inviting themselves to cookouts, picnics and other outdoor eating events. They're secondary pests — they move in after something else has already damaged the fruits. If the initial damage consists of a small hole in the bottom of the tomato and the insides are eaten out, suspect slugs in the garden. If the whole bottom of the tomato is eaten off, mice are probably to blame. If most of the tomato is eaten away, not necessarily from the bottom, a groundhog may be the villain or, in urban areas, a rat. A hole on the top of the tomato, near the cap, and feeding damage inside are signs that the European corn borer has been at work in your garden. Gnawing on the shoulders of the fruit may be the work of the tomato hornworm. Though these huge green caterpillars generally feed on the tomato foliage, they're not averse to munching on an occasional green tomato.

Q. My neighbor says he's going to cut his petunias to the ground in mid-July. Sounds like a pretty drastic way to shape them up.

A. Yes, but it's a good way to rejuvenate them. Cut off straggly growth, leaving plants just 3 to 4 inches tall with some foliage. Clean up dead or dying foliage, remove weeds and fertilize with a pinch of 5-10-5 per plant. The result should be a surge of new growth, lots of branches and, in two to four weeks, loads of flowers that will last until frost kills the plants. If you take a midsummer vacation, shear your petunias just before you leave. You won't have to look at the stubs, and you may have flowers waiting for you when you return.

our opinions

Romulus should pick a water commission

If there is anything that the Romulus City Council and the City Administration agree upon in the on-going controversy over the water-sewer debt retirement fund it is that it is a "mess".

Over a period of 20 some years the water-sewer monies have been utilized to bail out funds and services in trouble, and although several administrations have come and gone, none was ordered to stop the practice until recently.

A Department of Treasury, state audit, determined that approximately $2.1 million (the figure differs depending on who you talk to) is owed the water debt service retirement fund, and that the city should take immediate steps to repay that fund.

Obviously, Romulus doesn't have that kind of money available to transfer, so city officials are scrounging around to find a plan of action to resolve the problem.

They had a deadline set by the Attorney General's Office to present the plan, but the deadline has been extended from June 30 to an unspecified date because, as Regina King, an assistant to the Attorney General puts it, "The Attorney General is not in the business of governing municipalities or townships; we just want to make sure they abide by the laws."

As we see it, even if the city hurdles this crucial financial obstacle, it hasn't addressed itself to the main problem: How to prevent such incidents to occur in the future.

Under the township, there was a Water & Sewer Commission which was the watchdog of the fund. The appointed commission dissipated in 1970 when Romulus became a city.

Most will agree that the Commission did its work well. We would think that it is time for Council to reconvene the Commission even if it would take a charter amendment to do so.

Let's follow through on animal control

On April 13 the Huron Township Board voted to eliminate the position of animal control officer. The reason given was insufficient work to justify a full-time employee.

A second implied reason of course was that elimination of the post would save money. The position paid roughly $15,000 and by employing a part-time worker from the Water Department the small job would be done.

Supervisor A.J. Haener reassured the Board that should an emergency arise, the part-time employee would take care of the matter. Fair enough.

The emergency arose last Wednesday. A mad dog was in a resident's backyard.

Instead of a part-time animal control officer, a full-time police officer was sent who dispatched the dog with a shot to the head. It not being the policeman's responsibility to dispose of the carcass, he advised the resident to bury it.

The resident balked. Instead he called the Supervisor who told him he couldn't afford to pay someone overtime to get rid of the animal. He advised the resident to drag the carcass to the road for pickup in the morning.

Instead, the resident came to the Township meeting that night and raised the roof. He demanded service for the taxes he pays the Township — $1400 yearly.

Wisely, Trustee John Pushkar suggested that the Board move to provide the service.

Treasurer Christin Gamber, who was the opposing vote in the 5-1 decision to eliminate the full-time animal control officer on April 13, made the motion to have the part-time animal control officer remove the carcass that evening. The Board also moved that a dead goat be removed from an adjoining property which the resident had also been complaining about for the past few weeks.

We commend the Board's action. And we suggest to the Supervisor that he live up to the spirit of his words of April 13, overtime or not.

Dusty roads, threat to life

EDITOR — We need help. Specifically, I'm speaking for my 5-year-old son and all the other children and grown-ups who are suffering from asthma and have no choice but to reside on or near dusty roads and breathe in dust that chokes them. Even my son's breathing machine which he uses six times a day doesn't help, so we are tired of hearing that Wayne County doesn't have the funds to chloride the roads.

We people in Sumpster Township have to live and breathe like any other human being, and the dust-covered roads doesn't help. Won't someone out there care and do something?

Is it too much to ask? I want my son to breathe easier and breathe air that won't choke him with dust.

Here's how one banker saved state some money

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The following article was mailed to the ANP news desk by State Senator William Faust. It is an interesting bit of news, therefore, we are relaying it on to our readers.)

Enclosed is an article which was written outlining a rather unique occurrence in the legislative process — that being a clear cut example of a citizen making a suggestion, and the suggestion becoming law. Doc Mellinger at Wayne Bank had a suggestion which will reduce the regulatory burden on the state's banks as well as saving the state some money. The bill made so much sense that it quickly passed the Senate and the House and is scheduled to be signed by the Governor on June 21st.

WILLIAM FAUST
Senate Majority Leader

A common perception — true or not — is that an individual, all alone, doesn't stand much of a chance going 'one-on-one' with the bureaucracy.

"Doc" Mellinger may not be the only living example that victory is possible, but he is excellent proof of how one person, convinced that something needed correcting, went to the right people, followed through, and, this week, saw a law pass the Michigan Legislature that will save the state, he figures, between $20,000-25,000 a year.

"Not much," says Mellinger, "but every little bit helps."

Duane "Doc" Mellinger ("There are two stories about that nickname, but I can only tell you one. . .") is a banker. Has been for 30 years. He is presently Vice-President of Wayne Bank in Wayne, Michigan but started out in Santa Barbara, California with dreams of one day returning to Manilla, where he was stationed during World War II. He never made it back there ("You know how those things happen. . .") and eventually returned to Michigan where he was born and raised.

Being a banker, Mellinger has little tolerance for wasteful money management so the existence of an outdated law, costing the state hard-earned dollars, was all he needed to gear up for action.

Mellinger explained that Michigan required its chartered banks to file reports twice a year regarding their condition — or the state of their fiscal health. "No one objects to that," he says. "The state has a responsibility to make sure that banks doing business here are trustworthy and sound."

What he did object to, though, was that the semi-annual "condition reports" currently required by law were substantially like reports required by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC). The information from the FDIC is available through computer terminals which have been in operation for several years in the Financial Institutions Bureau, the regulatory agency for Michigan banks.

"I couldn't see why the state would have to go to the trouble of printing up forms, mailing them to all the banks, and compiling the information, when all they really had to do was tap into available computers. It was costly. It was time consuming. It was wasteful!"

So "Doc" Mellinger went to the Financial Institutions Bureau to see if the regulation could be changed. They said they had been trying to get the rule amended for years but, with one thing and another, it kept getting put on the back burner.

Undeterred, Mellinger decided to get it off the back burner and put in a call to his old friend, Bill Faust, who happens to be the Democratic Majority Leader of the Michigan Senate.

"Obviously, my friendship with Bill helped to get the ball rolling," admits Mellinger, "But I am convinced that I could have been anybody contacting his office and gotten the same response."

Displaying the thoroughness of someone used to getting things done, Mellinger then talked with Republican State Senator Robert Geake, in whose district he lives, and asked for his support as well.

"Both Senators — and their staffs — were extremely cooperative. They took time to research the situation, arranged to have legislation drafted, and kept in touch with me about the progress of the bill through the various committees."

Mellinger's suggestion met with little opposition in either the House or Senate and received bi-partisan support. Its aim — to eliminate red tape and unnecessary costs — dovetailed nicely with Legislative attempts to make Michigan more attractive to businesses; the reduction of postage, supplies, paper-handling and storage costs for the Financial Institutions Bureau satisfied a need to ease the burden on already over-worked agencies; and, last but by no means least, Mellinger's suggestion saved money.

"I think it turned out well for everyone," says Mellinger. "We all won."

Another look at Headlee

Tom Mooradian
Managing Editor

A philosopher once said that there are no such things as translations.

And, rewriting the following letter may somehow distort or lose some meaning, therefore, I'll let Senate Majority Leader William Faust take over from here:

It's ironic, but a portion of the "Headlee amendment" — designed to limit state spending and make such spending more efficient — is having exactly the opposite effect.

The Headlee amendment was promoted by Richard Headlee, the recently defeated Republican gubernatorial candidate, and was approved by Michigan voters in 1978. Part of the Headlee language is now Section 30, Article IX of the Michigan Constitution. Section 30 states that "the proportion of total state spending paid to all units of Local Government, taken as a group, shall not be reduced below that proportion in effect in fiscal year 1978-79." The proportion, later defined by statute, is 41.61 percent total and 58.39 percent state.

Section 30's intent was to ensure that the state doesn't fund new state programs at the expense of aid to local governments. In practice, though, Section 30 has had several unintended and undesirable effects. The section has restricted the ability of the governor and legislature to view the state budget in its entirety. Section 30 also forces decisions which tend to divert dollars from areas of greatest need to those of lesser need, makes state-side programs vulnerable to disproportionate funding reductions, and causes an overall inadequate allocation of resources. Here's why:

- Followed to its logical conclusion, Section 30 actually increases state spending beyond what is necessary or even reasonable. For example, during a recession there is an increase in the number of welfare caseloads, creating a need for additional social services funding. But for every dollar added to the social services budget, Section 30 mandates that 71 cents must be added to the local portion to maintain the state/local ratio.

- When budget cuts are necessary, Section 30 forces the governor and legislature to reduce spending primarily in areas where cyclical demand is at its peak. Many people believe that when there is a Section 30 imbalance, the state must simply provide additional dollars to local units. But in times of recession, this is not the case. During a recession there are no extra funds to allocate — instead, cuts are made. And because of Section 30, those cuts fall disproportionately on the state-side of the budget. The unequal reductions in state aid incurred by Michigan colleges and universities are to a large extent the result of this feature of Section 30.

- Section 30 penalizes the state for budget actions that are designed to help local units of government. For example, Executive Order 1982-13 cut $78.3 million in state aid to local school districts. However, to avoid having local school districts suffer such a loss, the legislature adopted a revised payment schedule which ensures that the schools will not incur a loss in their fiscal year (which runs from July 1 to June 30) while the state is able to delay having to pay that amount in its fiscal year (which runs from October 1 to September 30). But by doing this, the state created a Section 30 imbalance — despite the fact that the state's actions in reality avoided local unit reductions.

- Section 30 distorts true budget trends. Projections indicate that future spending needs will be concentrated in such areas as higher education, corrections, mental health and social services — all primarily state-side spending areas. Simultaneously, declining school enrollments will result in less demand for K-12 education funds — a local spending area. The result is future Section 30 imbalances which may force the state to direct dollars away from priority areas to areas of lesser demand.

- Finally, Section 30 creates a problem with the Budget Stabilization Fund. The fund's purpose is to save money during good economic times for use during poor economic times. However, payment into the fund is counted totally as state-side spending, which creates a Section 30 imbalance. To correct the imbalance, funds for local spending must be increased (if such funds are available) or state-side spending must be cut and added to the local side. The first option forces additional and probably unnecessary state spending to correct a paper imbalance; the second option limits the legislature's discretion in dealing with individual state-side problems.

Section 30 has changed state budgeting significantly and promises to be an even greater burden in the future. Ironically, this part of the Headlee amendment has promoted government waste and inefficiency, hamstringing state government in its efforts to deal efficiently with specific problems and needs, and created a bureaucratic nightmare.

On Family Day in Van Buren

EDITOR — In last week's letters' column there appeared a letter from a Van Buren Township resident, a Mr. Fischer, who is disenchanted with Van Buren for not holding this year's "Family Day." May we comment on that letter: Mr. Fischer's interest in Family Day pleased members of the committee and, we would like to see his name there.

We will try again to gather volunteers for next year and hope he, as well as others will join.

The Committee was headed by Donna Clark and consisted of Gary Sampson, Carl Marosi, Debbi Paulson, Marilyn Bach, Betty Vincent, Judy Schroeder, George Brown, Ron Yurchak, Rich Edwards, George Craven, Donna Hall, Delphine Dudick and myself.

We held four publicized meetings calling for volunteers, and there wasn't any interest — in other words, no one came.

Clubs said for the most part that it was too late to schedule for the event. They need longer lead time. Employees of the township are no longer required to donate time unless they wish, and we did not have funds to hire workers. The Park itself needed immediate corrections for safety precautions, and some major improvements to function safely.

We also were made aware that Family Day had lost in excess of $3,000 last year — common sense told us to set priorities.

The decision to hold several smaller events such as a Farmers Market, music in the park, art in the park and some specialized children's programs will provide an ongoing variety of events that should appeal to all ages.

To charge for park passes was a necessity, because in the past the park had operated out of a $200,000 fund that was depleted in 1982.

We simply needed the support to open the park.

Traditionally, Family Day has been to have a good time, and the proceeds were minimal — long-range planning with a base of support has to be in place to preserve our Park.

Our hard-working crew at the park is going that extra mile (just as most of our regular township employees) and are dressing up the park with TLC and flowers (donated by Garden Fantasy).

Each one of our citizens in Van Buren is part owner of the park, and I hope before summer is over you will all check us out — I think you'll like it.

The dusty roads and the impasse with the Wayne County Road Commission is at an end. I introduced a motion that was carried unanimously by our Board to share in the cost of chloriding our roads this year. The Supervisor negotiated an agreement and we will receive an application of dust palliative shortly. Supervisor George Craven's agreement includes both county and private roads.

We have audience participation before and after our Board Meetings, and would welcome your comments. We meet the 2nd and 4th Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. MARILYN MONTGOMERY, Trustee VB Township. Assigned Rep. to Park and Recreation and active participant in the reprogramming of the Department.

Gov. Blanchard is doing well

EDITOR — I can't believe the "logic" used in some of the recent letters that appeared in your paper on the recall of Governor James Blanchard.

Gov. Blanchard did what he had to do by imposing a temporary income tax increase. The recallers say that this increase is temporary or they ignore this fact.

It is an amendment to the bill to increase the income tax that the rate must go down. The present rate is 6.35%. In two years it will drop to 5.35%, and it will return to 4.6% when unemployment drops below 9%. Those who say taxes are unconstitutional are simply reading things into our Constitution.

The recallers keep crying "cut the fat."

If there is still fat, I doubt that it would be cut even if our taxes were lowered. What would be cut is state aid to cities, school districts, and universities. Road improvement plans, which help decrease unemployment, would be cut. Those on welfare, and unemployment would receive too little to live on.

If state aid to our school district were cut, either your property taxes would increase again, or more schools would be closed, programs cut, etc.

If state aid to the universities were cut, we'd have to go out of state and pay much more to get higher education.

If welfare and unemployment were cut, those trying to survive on these systems would become more desperate, which would increase the crime rate even more.

Right now it costs over $1.5 billion (per year) to support just those on unemployment. The $675 million income tax increase funds only 45% of this high cost which supports 16% of the adults living in Michigan. This doesn't include those supported by welfare, or ADC (Aid to Dependent Children).

In addition to the tremendous increase in the unemployed, Republicans and conservatives in Washington have cut aid to Michigan from the federal government. Reagan has imposed a tax cut. He passes along the decrease in revenue to the states; who must find a way to take up the slack.

I think you'll find that the amount you get back from the federal tax cut will just about pay for the state tax increase.

The recallers speak as though we're the only state raising taxes. Ohio, in the past two years, has nearly doubled its income tax rate. Since late 1982, 10 states have raised income taxes, 13 states increased their sales tax, 12 boosted gas taxes, and four increased cigarette taxes.

There is one major fault I see with Michigan's income tax policy. Everyone pays the same percentage of state income tax. Unlike the federal government, it makes no difference in Michigan whether one earns $10,000 or $100,000 one still pays 6.35%. I think we need to lower the percentage for those earning less, and raise the percentage for those earning $50,000 and up.

And in all, I believe Governor Blanchard is doing an excellent job.

Please, think logically and objectively before you sign a petition to recall Governor Blanchard, the man who has restored the faith of business in Michigan.

Reader angered over bank story

EDITOR — I read an article in your newspaper that really makes me mad.

It was about a senior citizen who had tried to cash her Social Security check and was refused. It is a sad comment on the way this country is going.

I am 26, unemployed for two years and had the same trouble cashing my income tax refund check.

What are older people and unemployed people who need the money, supposed to do? I think some rules should be changed for the people, not for government officials to fatten their paychecks.

Why eliminate trash pick-up?

EDITOR — I live in the city of Belleville, and have always thought the city's government was one of the best administrators...until recently.

I have read that starting July 1, 1983, the free special trash pickup will be eliminated due to sanitation cutbacks. But in the same issue I read the new city manager, Frank Pascarella, will be getting a raise.

This city manager was not elected by the city voters, nor was his salary hike approved by the city taxpayers! It is my understanding that upon application for the job, he knew what the salary and benefits were, but just a few months after taking office, eliminates a very much needed and appreciated service, in return for his own salary increase.

The article stated more money was spent on the special pickups than the regular last year. Then it is quite obvious that the service was widely used by citizens, thus causing a tremendous hardship by eliminating the weekly free pickup.

As a taxpayer and citizen of Belleville, I feel that such a cut in services should be approved by the voters.

I especially feel that any pay raises for city officials should be voted upon by the citizens not the council members!

EDITOR — I would like at this time to say, "Thank you" to Hazel Bigham, Mrs. Jane Atchinson, Mrs. Martha Brown and her daughters, Brian and Nancy Shephard, the Strawberry Queen contestants and their families, my family, Roger, Shawn & Shari, for helping to put on a tremendous pageant.

Also, I would like to extend this "thank you" to the Van Buren Public Schools, the churches, community clubs and organizations and the Van Buren Township and Belleville businesses who donated their time and gifts to make the Strawberry Queen contest a huge success.

This 'Lady' is really lucky

EDITOR — Is it ever too late to express gratitude and appreciation?

Hopefully not. For on the evening of 24 May, my large and people loving puppy ran away from my father. You can imagine my anxiety and dismay when Mom and I returned home at 11:30 p.m. and found Lady had been gone for four hours, and their home is only 1/2 mile from I-94.

Frankly, I called all the branches of law enforcement. The dispatcher for Belleville, Van Buren, and Sumpter Townships checked and said no dog of Lady's description had been picked up and promised to inform the patrols.

About 1:30 in the morning of the 25th, while the rest of us were out looking for Lady, Mom received a call from the dispatcher, Gary Docter, telling her that Lady had been found near Main and Liberty in Belleville (my folks live in the township) by officers Wall and Arnett and would we please go for her as she was soaking wet and they didn't want 85 lbs. of soaking wet puppy in the squad car.

By sheer accident I happened upon Main and Liberty and Officers Wall and Arnett — with Lady — mere seconds before the arrival of my brother and Mom.

Even though Lady was soaking wet and smelled of boat exhaust, these two men cared enough for her safety to get themselves wet putting her into the back of their car and "held" her for our arrival.

People today (myself often included) are usually quick to complain and slow to compliment and thank. I would like to use this opportunity to again thank dispatcher Gary Docter, and officers Wall and Arnett for being kind and caring enough to restore a member of our family to us.

reflections

Author! Author!

My book is going to be published!

This is my extremely modest way of saying, "Wow! I am an author!"

My dream has come true!

When I was a teen-ager sitting in the library of J.H. Gipson, president of The Caxton Printers, Ltd., in Caldwell, Idaho, reading manuscripts to him because his eyes had grown tired and he could no longer read them himself, I dreamed of one day having a manuscript go through many readers until, at last, it reached the president, and his saying, "This is it!"

Later, when I did the review and publicity for Caxton Printers, I would hold those hand-bound, lithographed, beautiful copies of books just published and day dream of the day that one of those copies would have MY name on it.

Forty-seven years have passed, and I have produced many things...six kids, columns, magazine articles, burned pork chops, and at long last...a book!

Come the spring sometime (publication date has not yet been set) I will hold in my hand a beautifully bound book, "I've never told anyone, but...Exploring the hidden reality of natural events" and shout to the world, "I've done it!"

Knowing one is going to have a book published is a bit like knowing one is pregnant for the first time...the excitement, the awe, the hugging to one's self the beautiful knowledge that a new life is being formed, WITHIN YOU. It is the same with a book. It came from YOU!

You are probably wondering how my family is reacting to what has happened to their mother. Would you believe it has hardly caused a ripple?

The day I heard the exciting news from my agent, my husband came through the door, water dripping from his sweatband, golf bag drooping from his shoulders, and I knew from looking at him that there wasn't one thing in this world that could lift his spirits. He had a bad day on the golf course. Nevertheless I tried.

"My book is going to be published," I shouted and leaped at him in my graceful, gazelle fashion. He turned his shoulder with the golf bag on it to catch the brunt of it and said, "I'll be damned."

"Aren't you excited?" I shouted.

He carefully eased his golf bag from his shoulder, wiped his dripping face with the end of his shirt and slumped down in a chair.

"You said you were going to one day, didn't you?" he said.

"But it's happened," I shouted. "It's happened."

"Did you ever think it wouldn't?" he asked reasonable enough.

I stood there for a moment lost in my dreams, and then I said, "Just think I am going to be an author."

"You ARE an author," he answered. "You have already written the book, haven't you?"

"Oh wow!" I sang and began dancing around the room, listening to music heard only by myself.

"What's she doing? one of my kids asked as he came through the door.

"My manuscript has been accepted! Your mother is an author!" I grabbed him around the neck and tried to get him to dance with me, but he stood there stolid as Gibraltair.

"How much will you make?" he asked.

I gave him a shove and he grinned at me.

"Got any peanut butter?" Peanut butter! When his mother was going to be an author, that kid could think only of peanut butter! But then, he's the kid that ate a peanut butter sandwich just before he got married. He probably took a jar of it along on his honeymoon.

The next kid to come through the door was griping before she even knew there was anyone in the room to hear her.

"Did you put my clothes in the dryer?"

too.

Some years ago, we moved to Maui without knowing anything about it — other than it was one of the Hawaiian Islands. We wondered: Did the natives speak English? (Answer: now and then mostly by accident.) Did they live in grass huts? (Only during the day, so as not to disappoint the tourists.) Would we have to eat poi? (The one and only advantage to being a "haole" was not having to eat poi.) Haole: white person (though not necessarily white skinned), mainlander, tourist — usually preceded by the word "dumb."

The dumb haole, for instance, didn't know that those little gecko lizards squealing at you from the ceiling weren't there to scare you, but to keep the bug population down. Every savvy household had one.

And the dumb haole soon learned that when someone offered you tuna, all 10 pounds of it came from the ocean and not from a can, and it stared at you.

But this dumb haole never felt more at home. It took a while to realize that the island way of life (slow and easy) and the pidgin

The 'Fourt' July

Funny how one thought can lead to another and another and, though they're not even related, pretty soon you're back to the original thought again.

For instance, I was thinking about this coming Monday. About how it's called Independence Day on the calendars and in the history books, but no one ever really says "Independence Day" out loud.

It's always the "Fourth of July." (Even when we don't celebrate it on exactly the "Fourth.")

The "Fourth of July" ... Unless you happened to be an old Finnlander from the Copper Country named Matti — in which case, you would say "Fourt' July." All one word.

The reason Matti would say "Fourt' July" is because the Finnish language doesn't recognize words like, "of," "to," and "the."

Thus, if you go to the Copper Country (the tip of the rabbit's ear in the U.P.), you are likely to hear what sounds like toddler talk: "Let's go store," or "I'm going sauna."

People in the Copper Country speak their own unique kind of patois or "pidgin." Sometimes they combine Finnish and English into a sort of "Finnlish," as they call it.

I was born in the Copper Country and, though we had to live in or near Detroit (where the jobs were), I spent every summer of my growing-up years "Up North."

And every summer I picked up the "pidgin" and spoke it like a native — then dropped it like a hot potato just past Bay City on the way home. But up there, if you didn't speak their "brogue," you could be mistaken for a tourist — perish the thought.

It's a funny thing up there. Their very existence depends on the tourist, yet the locals would just as soon close the borders at Baraga and not let anyone in who didn't have positive proof of kinship.

The suspicion comes, I think, from their feelings for their land. The Copper Country still has some of the most spectacular natural scenery in Michigan, and the people work hard to protect it. Mainly, by leaving it alone.

That's the way it is on Maui,

JOYCE HAGELTHORN

"My manuscript has been accepted..."

"I'll bet you didn't put my clothes in the dryer..."

And so it went. A long time ago some very wise man wrote, "A prophet is without honor in his own country." I was thinking of that saying and feeling a wee bit let down, when my husband came into the room where I was sitting alone, kissed me on my cheek, and said, "This is the first time I have ever kissed an author."

Then my peanut butter kid said as I drove away from his house one afternoon, "Mom, I really am proud of you and glad about your book."

My gripey young one, after she saw that her clothes had been put in the dryer, came leaping up the stairs and said, "Boy, I'll bet I know a lot of people who are going to be impressed that MY mom is an author."

I know they are all pleased and proud...I REALLY know that. But I am not sure how they are going to feel when I insist that I have seven kids and that they accept that book as their sibling. I am just not sure how they will react to that....!!

MONA GRIGG

English were uncannily similar to that of the Copper Country — 4,000 miles away.

"You like go fisheen?" could have been said by Matti of the U.P., as well as by Moku of Maui. They would have understood one another perfectly.

They would have also understood one another's concerns about the territory they occupied: The spectacular scenery, the workings of Mother Nature were things mere mortals shouldn't tamper with. The tourists, by their very numbers, inevitably destroyed the natural beauty that drew them there. Thus, for both Matti and Moku, imaginary borders and proofs of kinship by way of pidgin and brogue.

So what does all this have to do with coming Monday? Well, I was just thinking that, while Matti would have said, "Fourt' July," Moku would have said "Fourt'a July."

Close enough. Have a Happy.

Faith-Denton to receive new minister

Faith-Denton United Methodist Church in Belleville is the new assignment for the Rev. Hoon Hee Wong, who has spent most of his 34 years in the ministry in the Far East.

Wong, 56, presided over his first service at Faith-Denton on June 19.

Prior to his appointment in Belleville, Wong served for three years as minister to Central Park United Church in Aberdeen, Washington. He arrived in the United States in 1980, after more than 30 years of preaching to congregations in Malaysia, China, and Singapore.

While overseas, Wong was also a District Superintendent for the Methodist Church.

The son of a Methodist preacher in Malaysia, Wong graduated from Trinity Theological College in Singapore in 1954. He received a bachelor's degree in English and Philosophy at the University of Malaysia in 1960.

Wong's wife Pat is the owner of the Pagoda Restaurant in Ann Arbor.

The new minister has five children, four in Texas and one in Singapore, and six grandchildren.

Local student wins award

Nadine Doolan of Romulus graduated from Mercy College of Detroit's Weekend College. She was awarded a Bachelor of Science degree in health services.

A staff nurse in the Pediatric department at Heritage Hospital in Taylor, Doolan said she enrolled in Mercy's Weekend College program because it fit well into her schedule.

"I found it easier for me to go to school every third Saturday, than to go at night after working eight hours," she explained. "The experience was a very good one for me. I enjoyed my time at Mercy."

Weekend College (WEC), offering six major areas of study, is an educational opportunity for adults whose employment and/or family schedule are incompatible with college attendance during the regular week.

Doolan said she will use her degree to advance in her career, moving in the direction of nursing administration.

"I originally started going to school as a hobby, taking a few classes, but eventually it turned into a degree," she said.

Weekend College classes generally meet five times in a semester with two Saturdays between each session. Meetings last about four hours. Students supplement classroom work with directed outside study which enables them to cover the same course content and meet the same academic standards as their counterparts in traditional college programs. Classes meet during the Fall and Winter semesters and Summer session.

Views On Dental Health

By SHERMAN H. KANE, D.D.S.

MORE THAN ONE TREATMENT PLAN

It's truth time. Your teeth have been x-rayed and examined. Now your dentist explains in detail what, if any problems exist and how he intends to proceed. It is called the treatment plan. There are usually several ways to reach the desired results, therefore many dentists will prepare two or more treatment plans. Dental needs and financial resources can vary from patient to patient. The patient will then decide which plan he desires.

er, it does have the advantage of being fixed in place. Many individuals can't afford a fixed bridge so they may opt for the less expensive alternative plan of a removable partial denture.

Within reason, the patient should know exactly what is going to be done, how long it will take, the cost, the alternatives, and the chances of further treatment of the future.

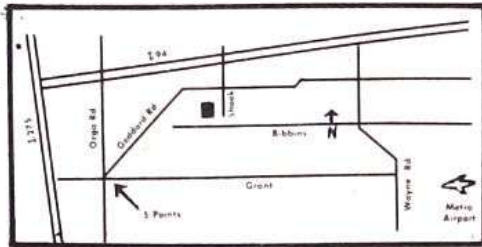

... A public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: SHERMAN H. KANE, D.D.S., 9840 Haggerty Rd., Belleville, Phone 697-4400.

On guard

Luke Skywalker and Darth Vader will be among the characters on display July 1 through 10 in the Jedi Adventure Center in the East Court of The Westland Center. Behind-the-scene displays from the Star Wars saga will be among the features of the exhibit's three modules. A variety of prizes will be awarded during a "Star of the Day" contest.

Westland has Jedi exhibits

The Star Wars saga will come alive July 1 through 10 in the Jedi Adventure Center, a futuristic display to be featured in the East Court of the Westland Center during business hours.

Consisting of three modules, The Jedi Adventure Center includes a Jedi Hall of Fame, Photo Center and Communications Center. Visitors to the Hall of Fame will view original artwork, concepts, photos, drawings, documents and behind-the-scene displays from the movies Star Wars, The Empire Strikes Back and Return of the Jedi.

A fantasy sequence from Return of the Jedi is featured in the wrap-around photo setting highlighted in the Photo Center. Visitors are encouraged to bring their own cameras to capture this unique backdrop.

In the Communications Center Darth Vader and C-3PO communicate with visitors through special receivers.

A "Star of the Day" contest will be featured each day as visitors attempt to match the designated character on a Star Wars poster in a random drawing. Various Star Wars prizes will be presented to those whose card matches the character.

The Westland Center is located at 35000 Warren at Wayne Road in Westland.

Ayers: 'professional eccentric'

KEVIN AYERS
"The Kevin Ayers Collection"
(Charly Import)

Kevin Ayers is definitely an acquired taste, much like an old, rare wine. His records have been released in the U.S. very sporadically, the best known (and my personal favorite) being the entire second side of the "June 1, 1974" LP featuring, in addition to Ayers; Eno, John Cale, and Nico.

He is a self-professed "professional eccentric" whose theory for making it through life is "when things get too weird, throw in a banana." The deep-voiced crooner first burst onto the music scene in 1967 as a founding member of Soft Machine, where he stayed for two albums and like years.

His first two solo LP's, "Joy of a Toy" and "Shooting at the Moon" included sidemen like Mike Oldfield, David Bedford, and Lol Coxhill, and had a touch of jazz in the music, as can be heard from the cuts from those albums, "The Lady Rachel" and "May I."

"May I" and its French brethren, "Puis-Je?," is one of the world's greatest ever love songs because of its simplistic honesty. "May I" he sings, "sit and stare at you for awhile?" Worthy of Lou Reed, whose lyrical honesty matches Ayers'.

Each of Ayers' ten solo LP's are spoken for on this collection, with the exception of the live "June 1, 1974" album. Early tunes like the rollicking Sweet Jane-ish "Stranger In The Blue Suede Shoes" and "Shouting in a Bucket Blues" highlight the record, although more recent material like "Strange Song" and "Money, Money, Money" from 1980's "That's What You Get Babe" LP also holds up well.

All in all, you get nearly an hour's worth of Kevin Ayers, one of the most notable singers of the 70's, who remained far too obscure in America, but that's our loss. Do yourself a favor: check out Kevin Ayers, the world-have-been Sinatra of our generation.

PLANET P
(Geffin)

This serves as a reminder that even though the record charts have improved 500 percent the past couple of years, there's still a lot of mindless drivel sneaking up the charts. File this one with Berlin: in the garage.

JACKIE WILSON
"The Jackie Wilson Story"
(Epic)

Jackie Wilson had one of the greatest voices in the history of popular music, yet the only song most people remember him for is "Higher and Higher." This stunning compilation of R&B-based pop should help put the late singer at the forefront of every rock record collection, where it deserves to be.

WALTER EGAN
"Wild Exhibitions"
(Backstreet)

Egan has been around for years, making good, solid pop records based in the early California surf sound with a little help from his friends like Lindsey Buckingham and David Lindley, but has never come close to denting the market.

Until now, that is. "Fool Moon Fire" is a bonafide hit single, which means that more people will listen to the rest of this record than otherwise would, and they'll be dancin' to it all summer long.

Auto Club urges Council to halt traffic death predictions

The Automobile Club of Michigan has urged the National Safety Council (NSC) to halt its pre-July 4 holiday traffic death predictions because they are inaccurate and damage the travel industry by making motorists needlessly fear holiday trips.

The Auto Club also urged Michigan's media not to broadcast pre-holiday death predictions.

"The Council's predictions incorrectly imply that it is more dangerous on a holiday weekend to take an overnight trip than it is to stay home and use the car in familiar areas," stated Auto Club president Jack Avignone in a letter to NSC acting president Charles Gilchrist.

The Auto Club also noted the NSC's figures are guesses which lack scientific backing.

An Auto Club analysis of holiday traffic accidents over the past five summers shows that 77 percent of the fatalities occurred within 25 miles of home to persons not on vacation.

"The Safety Council's holiday statistics actually discourage overnight or weekend holiday trips and urge persons to stay near home where travel is the most dangerous," he said.

Another false implication of NSC predictions, according to the Auto Club, is that it is more dangerous to drive during holiday weekends than non-holiday weekends.

"Eleven persons died on Michigan highways during the most recent 78-hour Memorial weekend," Avignone said. "During the following 54-hour weekend the traffic death toll was 12."

"Nine persons died on Michigan highways during the 78-hour Memorial weekend in 1982, 23 died the weekend before and 24 the weekend after," Avignone said. Both non-holiday weekends were 54-hour periods.

Rather than scaring motorists into driving safely, Avignone urged the NSC to use the Auto Club's positive safety approach which urges all to wear safety belts every mile they drive and refrain from drinking before getting behind the wheel.

During the upcoming Fourth of July weekend, Auto Club's "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" holiday bulletins will be broadcast hourly by more than 160 Michigan radio stations. The Michigan Department of Transportation predicts motorists will drive 750 million miles, up 3 percent compared to the 1982 July Fourth weekend volume.

The Auto Club's analysis of 15 summer holidays shows that in addition to driving near home, alcohol and two-lane roads are major factors in traffic deaths. Fifty-one percent of the 280 at-fault drivers were known to be impaired by alcohol and 17 percent were suspected of drinking. Eighty-three percent of the accidents occurred on two-lane roads.

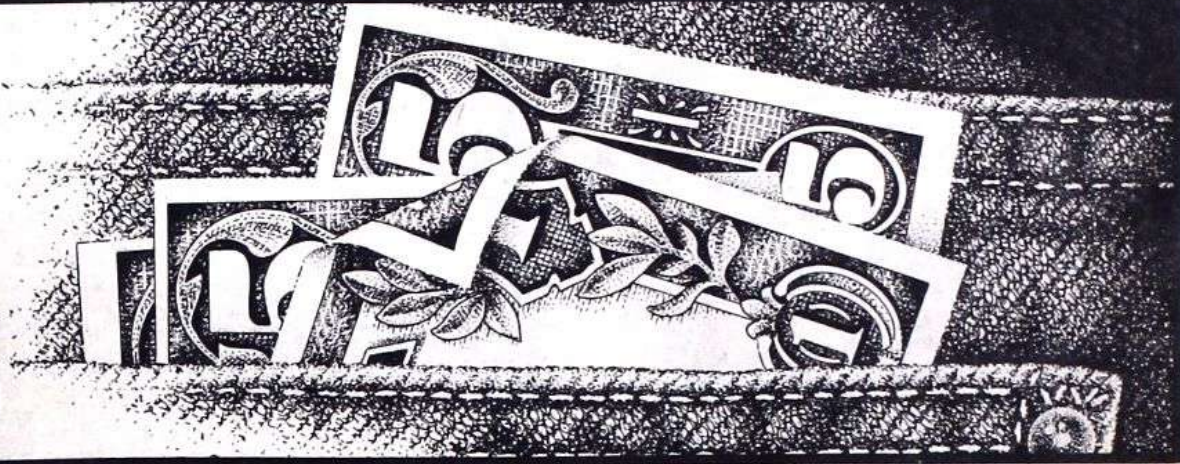

A special appeal is being made by the Auto Club for motorists to be extra alert for motorcyclists this July 4 holiday. Six of the 11 traffic accident victims over the most recent Memorial weekend were motorcyclists. Four cyclists died in head-on collisions with cars at dusk. The other two cyclists struck a van or truck which turned in front of them.

The Auto Club reminds motorcycle operators to wear bright-colored clothing, reflective helmets and leave room for maneuvering out of the way of other drivers and ride with lights on at all times.

Motorists are urged to keep headlights on when driving on two-lane roads.

State soccer champions

Three may mean "bad luck" for some, but for the Westland Hornets, who for two consecutive years were beaten in the state finals for the soccer crown, made their third trip was a winning one. The Hornets won the state title and will advance to play for the national crown next month. Members of the championship team include: Julie Fitch (seated first row, from left), Heather Hysko,

Westland Hornets win state soccer crown

Edging an excellent team from Fraser, the Westland Hornets captured its first state soccer cup in competitions staged recently at Schoolcraft College. The local girls' team, coached by Bob Hysko, emerged on top by a score of 3-2. In the semi-finals, Westland eliminated BESL Troy Eagles 4-0. The Troy team is coached by Walt Peterman and was the defending State champs. The Eagles have eliminated the Hornets for the past two years in the finals; this victory was the biggest.

The Westland girls will advance to the Regionals in Omaha, Nebraska, which will be held July 14-17. The team will be one of six teams from Michigan and they will be playing state champs from Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and Missouri. But before Omaha, the girls will play in the Wolverine Tournament for the fourth time. The tournament will be held at Schoolcraft College during the 4th of July weekend. Some of the finest teams in the country will be there. Members of the state championship team include the following: Tamara Brown, Sherra Christian, Jodi Dallenbach, Cheryl Dobbs, Julie Fitch, Tracey Greenhalge, Heather Hysko, Julie Hysko, Lisa Hysko, Beverly Keith, Ruth Knoerl, Michelle Sanchez, Lynne Shelly, Belandia Speights, Julie Tortora, Wendy Wagner, Kendra Whiteley, and the team was coached by Bob Hysko, Jerry Hysko, and Ida Shelly.

Ex-QB to lead Huron Chiefs again

Jamie Hinojosa, who served as football coach for the New Boston Huron Chiefs the past two seasons, will be asked to return as coach this fall. At a meeting June 15, School Supt.

Gary Jackson informed John Cady, former member of the Huron Athletic Association, that Hinojosa would be invited to return to the post, along with his assistant Greg Hammond and junior varsity coach Butch Gubbini. These coaches performed the same functions for two years under the guise of the Huron Athletic Association, a private group of concerned parents who conducted the athletic program when the school withdrew its finances and permitted the group to step in. They will be paid the same nominal fee as last year. $1,000 for varsity coach and $500 for junior varsity. This coming year, the sports program will be conducted under the authority of the school structure, and will be financed by the Extra-Curricular Activities Committee Fund which will raise money through candy sales and bingos. Jimmy Okler, also a former member of the Association, will also return as cross country coach.

City golf tourney information coming

The Associated Newspapers' Sports Staff is tying the loose ends together for the 1983 City Championship Golf Tournaments and the facts and figures will be presented here next week. The annual tournament, opened to amateur male golfers in Romulus, Wayne, Westland, Inkster, Canton and Garden City will be held next month. Information and registration fees will be available on these pages next week. The tournament is sponsored by the participating parks and recreation departments and The Associated Newspapers.

Jay Dorenbecker will return as the JV girls' basketball coach and will also serve in the position of junior high athletic director. Cady will be retained as Athletic Director for Huron High School, with the responsibility of conducting the entire athletic program. The Huron Athletic Association will officially cease to function under its current arrangement July 1.

Slugfest Softballers continue chase for titles

While the slugfest continues in the Class B American Division where The Old Inn & Out is hanging on to a precarious lead, Cagney's, over in the National Division remains the "team to beat" as the Westland women's "B" Division leader is undefeated in seven starts.

W.A.O.A. as winner June Evans twirled an 8-hitter. Mary Wattson and Cheryl Szczodowski collected two and three hits, respectively, for the losers.

Rains washed out Monday and Tuesday night's action, but when games resume they will still be chasing unbeaten Garden City Garage, which has piled up 10 consecutive victories in the Men's Class C Central Division. The league-leader has opened up a five-game gap between it and the second place Cagney's which lags in the runner-up with a 5-2 mark.

Linda Lesczynski picked up three hits, including a double, and JoAnn Rayburn carved out two singles and three RBIs off of loser Jan Aneelone.

Also unbeaten is the Tradevine which has an 8-0 record in the Eastern Division.

In an abbreviated game stopped because of the "mercy rule", Cagney's routed Lonnie's 12-0 behind Lori Isher's four-hit pitching. Lonnie's Paula Campbell got two of her team's four hits, stroking a single and double. Patty Rizo paced the winners as she latched on to two singles.

With Steve Briski on the mound, Garden City Garage held off Farwell & Friends 4-1 for their 10th victory. Briski gave up a run-scoring single in the fifth inning which spoiled his bid for a rare shutout.

Rocco's came up with 18 hits and seven runs in the fourth inning to turn back Old Inn & Out as Kim Shock earned the decision. Shock was tagged for nine hits with Julie Wilga hammering a homer and a single and Lauren Thompson coming up with a pair of singles.

Losing hurler Bill Farewell gave up 10 hits, including a pair of singles to Todd Crump and Briski.

However, loser Shari Healey found herself in trouble early as Rocco's erupted for four runs in the second inning and Linda Toye wielded the "hot bat" as she belted a single, double and triple. Sharon Laird had three RBIs thanks to a pair of hits.

Sixth-place Pakie Dokie Athletics were no match for DeSota Paints which erupted for six runs in the second inning off of loser Ron Farmer then added eight more in the third to break open a close game.

Sabatini's rally fell short as it was edged by Alex & Company, 9-8 in another women's Class B thriller. Alex put three runs on the scoreboard in each of the first three innings, then winning pitcher Deb Anderson settled down and blanked her rivals the last two innings.

John Ketelhut and Bill Connaughton led the assault as they collected six hits and six RBIs between them. Ketelhut drilled a pair of singles and a triple, while Connaughton banged out a single, double and triple.

Deb Robbins stroked two singles and a triple for the losers and teammate Jan Hollowicki blasted a pair of singles and drove in two runs.

Larry Cooper, the winning pitcher, served up a pair of singles to John Parsell.

Tradevine needed a last inning rally to shake a pesky Three Kegs Round club which had a 5-4 edge after three innings before the league-leader came up with three runs in the top of the fifth then exploded for five runs in the seventh.

Dee Discher, charged with the loss, served up two homers to Cheryl Johnson who had four RBIs, while Star Girdan collected three hits.

Greg O'Neill homered and added two singles for three runs batted in, while Gary Lubinsky socked three singles and Mark Cesarz belted a single, double and triple off of loser, Dave Green.

Held scoreless the first five innings, Messenger Publications scored twice in the top of the sixth, then added four big runs in the seventh to jolt Westland Key & Lock 6-4. Westland Key had built up a 4-0 lead before the proverbial roof collapsed.

Meanwhile, winner Dave Gillies gave up two singles to Green.

Losing pitcher Tammy Deyles had her problems with Debbie Kolnity who drilled a four-bagger and singled and also had three RBIs. Sandy Brovien also checked in with a single and a double for three RBIs. Ann Sailus stroked three hits.

In Class B action, Rocco's turned back Jake's Lounge 9-1 behind Tom Traub's eight-hitter. Dave Conlin and Jim Irwin paced the losers with two hits apiece, while Jim Sovliere sliced three hits. Keith McMann and Greg O'Neill each had two against loser Ron Hayes.

Sailus, who got credit for the win, gave up a two-run homer to Dennise Morehouse.

In the Women's Class B Division, Dingman Electrics put down

Great outdoors is great fun

By THAYNE SMITH

The Great Outdoors is many things to many people.

It covers the globe in one respect or another. It knows no particular language, creed, race or event, but includes all of them.

For instance, camping and hiking are leading outdoor sports, and know no bounds. The Olympic Games, spreading to all nations, are a form of outdoor sports.

Outdoor sports and recreation

In the great democracies of the North American continent, outdoor sports and recreation are most prominent and are considered a way of life. To most of our citizens, the Great Outdoors is a part of everyday living.

Just the desire to be a part of the Great Outdoors brings us lobsters from Maine and the finest of oysters from Chesapeake Bay.

From Canada and the Arctic provinces there are char and lake trout, caught by net and hook and line, and the Kodiak Bear from Alaska is one of the most prized trophies of the hunter.

To the office worker in a metropolitan city, the Great Outdoors is a bright, new fuel-efficient motor home gliding quietly around a scenic mountain road in the Blue Ridge, the Rockies or the Sierras.

To another, it's a camping trailer or pop-up tent camper parked in a serene setting, beside a quiet trout stream in Montana or Maine.

Dune busting

To the factory man in Los Angeles, it's busting a Bronco across the sand dunes of Southern California or the desert of Nevada, or climbing a rough, steep and rocky trail to undetermined heights to prospect for bits of silver and gold.

To the midwest school youngster, it's a shiny new rod and reel with stout line, hook, and bobber, and toes dangling in the water of a pretty farm pond, with an eye on a stringer of bluegill.

To the southern car or insurance salesman, it's a fast bass or striper boat, speeding across a man-made lake dotted with trees and bluffs and rocky points, where big bass lurk and await the expert presentation of lures and baits.

Locating fish

To the charter boat captain on the Great Lakes or out of Margate or Seattle, it's a diligent search with a powerful new, computerized sonar graph to locate and catch fish for his customers.

The duck and goose hunters across the continent, it's a swig of hot coffee from a strout stainless steel bottle, as a chilling north wind howls through the reeds of a blind and bounces decoys on the marshes, bays and backwaters of the land.

Barbecuing

To a group of senior citizens in Michigan, it's a patio "barbecue," with fresh-caught coho salmon being slowly smoked over charcoal and hickory, for the "meal of a lifetime."

At Indianapolis, Daytona, Riverside and Atlanta, it's a holiday race of fast cars and fast people, following slow living and traffic jams.

To most who love and appreciate it, it's a quick snapshot of others enjoying themselves, preserving forever in film the thousands of good things the Great Outdoors has to offer.

Waltzing into Sports

Do you remember Fred Allen?

By ALAN WALTZ
(Special ANP Sports Writer)

Do you remember Fred Allen, the former Wayne High coach of the 1940's and the 1950's?

He sure has an interesting story to tell.

Allen Played center at the U. of Michigan back in the thirties and although no one knows for sure because he didn't brag about it, some oldtimers tell me he was a very smart center at U of M. who was quite a scorer; he could shoot hooks or anything else he needed to score and was equally adept with either hand making it very hard for someone to defense against him.

He also was noted for his quickness on defense and was known as one of the shrewdest centers in the Big Ten Conference at that time.

During those times Mr. Allen stressed defense and his drills on this would be long and hard. If his teams allowed more than 35 points in a game you could be sure that Monday's practice would be devoted entirely to correcting defensive mistakes. Everyone hated this and soon found out it was a lot easier on them in practice if they played tight defense in the games.

In 1949 his team won 10 games and lost 5 and three of those losses were by a total of 6 points. On that team he had a junior center named Cedric Dempsey who shared the starting slot with John Pega and Bab Grannan.

Inasmuch as he knew he had a powerhouse coming back the next year everyone was wondering about the center situation.

He had Dempsey who was a great ball-handler and shooter and he also had John Pega who was big and strong and wiped the boards clean. What was he going to do with two centers? Well Mr. Allen foresaw college talent in Dempsey and switched him to guard his senior year. He was about 6'2" tall and Allen thought he would be too small for a college center so he was grooming him ahead of time for his college career.

At the same time he knew Pega wasn't going to college and told him he was the starting center for his senior year, and told him to "go get those rebounds" and we would have a winning team.

In addition to his coaching Mr.

Allen also handled the Latin in high school and no one can accuse him of "goofing off" in class as his students soon found out his classes were all business and no one could ever accuse him of diagramming basketball plays in his Latin classes. His students all loved and respected him for his good teaching and good humor.

In 1950 with Dempsey and Richard Arndt at guards, Denny Putnam and Jim Clark at the forwards and Pega at Center Wayne High dominated the league. Other members of that team were Chuck Henwood, Jim Paffel, Bill Basham, Milton Glass, Doyle Dodd, Perry Paris and Chuck Templeton.

Dempsey was the leader and everyone looked to him for the "big basket" when they needed it and he fed off pinpoint passes ala Oscar Robertson when he was closely guarded and never did he take a "bad" shot.

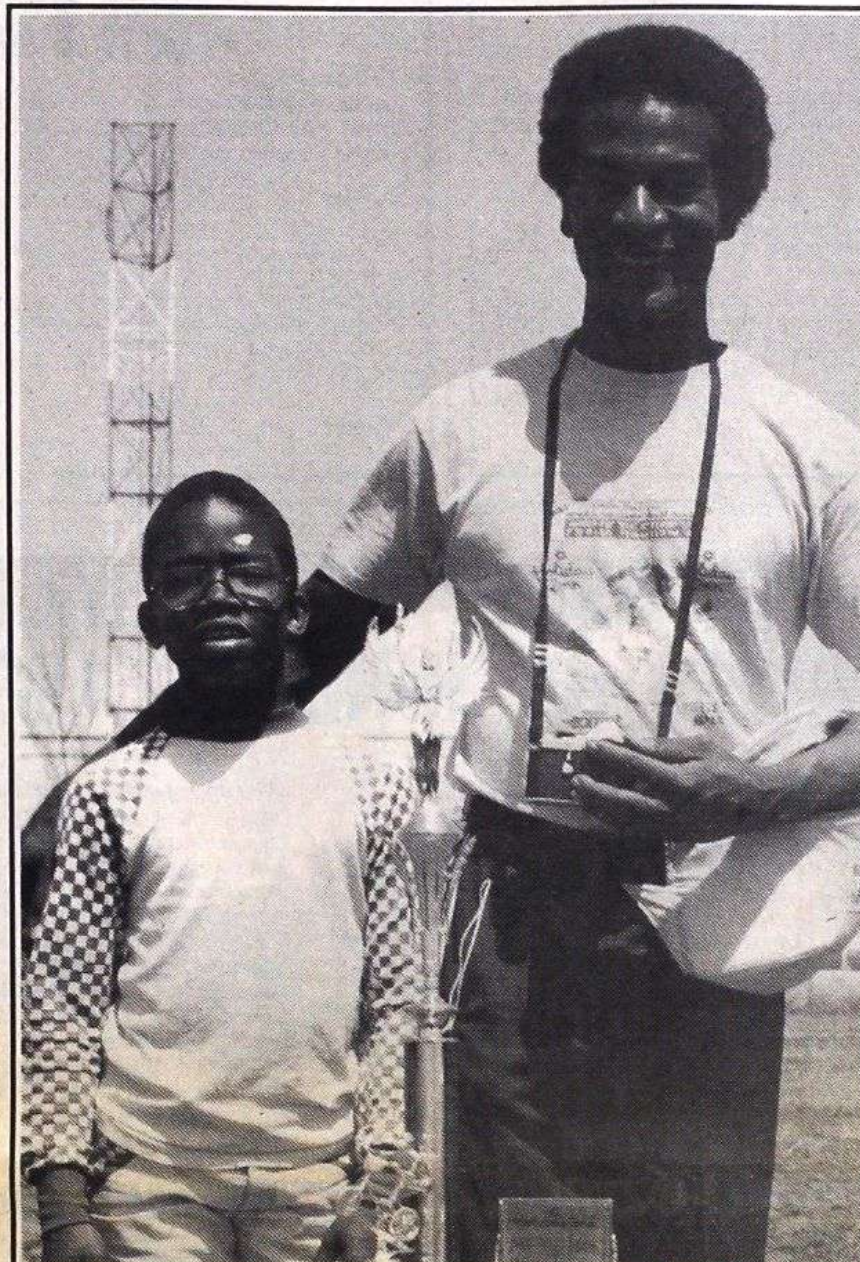

That team was one of Wayne's best and as far Mr. Dempsey? Well he went on to star at Albion College as a guard (what else?) and as a result of Mr. Allen's foresight he soon was on the coaching staff at Albion and then I believe (not sure) he was athletic director. At this writing one of his former team mates tells me he is now the athletic director at the Univ. of Arizona.

As for Fred Allen the last I heard he has retired and is living in Dearborn but am not sure about that. Someone else says he's retired in Arizona but cannot verify that. If so, he must be down there to help his former pupil Dempsey with his sage advice in running the U. of Arizona athletic department.

Some of Mr. Allen's players were telling me the other day about how he chewed out his team. The more notable quotes went like this: "That was the most disgusting and ridiculous pass I ever saw." Another: "If you boys continue on in practice like this, I can stay in the locker room on game night cause you boys couldn't possibly win playing like this."

The one I like the best though was told to me by Jim Clark. It goes like this: "Give me five new players on the court because the way you starters are loafing in this practice, there's no possible way you can start the next game."

Clark said he would send his starting five to the showers and finish the team practice with subs and the next day at practice with elbows and bodies flying all over the floor. So we all thank you coach Allen for your "suttle" way of handling us and for those precious years you gave to us on the basketball court at Wayne High.

At the top of his class, Kareen beams as he stands tall beside his father who has encouraged him in a sport that has many spills and thrills. Kareen also has more than 150 trophies for his efforts in the Bicycle Moto-Cross sport.

He's in a class all by himself

By TERRANCE HICKS
(ANP Special Writer)

Kareen Sigler is like any other child his age in Inkster. The 10-year-old Kareen likes to play video games, travel and ride bikes.

The latter is what sets him apart from the average 10-year-old. He rides bikes exceptionally well, so well in fact that he is the Michigan Bicycle Moto-Cross State Champ.

"I'd like to see him turn professional, but at the moment and at his age he is just having loads of fun," said his father, Carl Sigler.

Kareen got his start when his dad purchased a Huff-rand dirt bike from a local department store. When they opened a B.M.X. (Bicycle Moto-Cross) race course on Michigan Avenue just west of Middlebelt Road in Inkster, Kareen wanted to give it a try.

Kareen has never had any injuries.

Before a race he practices 1-2 hours a day on rollers, exercises and gets plenty of rest. He is at the top of his class in a sport which rarely sees blacks at his age participating.

"Kareen doesn't feel any pressure because he might be the only black competing, in fact that makes him work that much harder," commented Carl Sigler.

Approximately 20 percent of the pros in B.M.X. today are black.

During his first year of racing he averaged 5 local races per week. In a span of 13 months he rose from beginner status to the Michigan State Championship. At the present time he has earned over 150 trophies and plaques, including complimentary awards from track officials and peers for sportsmanship.

Kareen and the family travel extensively. He has raced in Florida, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.

"We really get involved. I put the bike on the bike-rack and pack the family up and when we arrive have a little picnic," explained Sigler.

There is another aspiring racer in the family, Kareen's stepbrother Wesley Wilson is also on the B.M.X. Circuit.

Kareen is currently licensed and sanctioned by the A.B.A. (American Bicycle Association) and the N.B.L. (National Bicycle League). He is currently ranked No. 2 in Michigan, District No. 1.

"During his races Kareen displays exuberant sportsmanship and earnest regard for fellow riders," remarked his father.

Kareen's next race is July 31 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Wayne Ford snaps Plymouth streak at 11

Never on Sunday for Wayne Ford?

That's what it appeared until the Pee Wee Reese team stopped an excellent Plymouth quality Construction club last Sunday in a cliffhanger, 3-2.

Plymouth has run up 11 consecutive victories in the Pee Wee Reese League and also boasted the Allen Park Memorial Day Tournament title before running into the Westland ball club last Sunday.

The Westlanders have had some problems on Sunday, but last Sunday it was a different story.

Wayne Ford scored one run in the first inning on a walk to Mike Heard. He stole second and third and scored on Craig Lesioes single. Kevin Bates doubled to start the second, then stole third and scored on Scott Hill's sacrifice fly.

Quality Construction scored runs in the third and sixth innings.

The dramatic ending came in the bottom of the seventh. With two outs, Mike Sulak, the Wayne Ford pitcher, lined a triple over the center fielder's head. On the throw to third base the ball ended up in the dugout with Sulak scoring.

Sulak, the winning pitcher, gave up a bunt single in the third for the only hit for Quality. Wayne Ford's record is now 10 and 2.
